SENATE HOLDS FATE OF ISLAND FREEDOM BILL

House Overrides Hoover Veto by Ballot of 274 to 94.

PRESIDENT VISIONS GRAVE WAR DANGER

Senator Robinson Confident Upper Chamber Will Sustain Executive's Act.

(Associated Press.)

One formidable obstacle last night stood between the Philippine Islands and freedom—a Senate vote on overriding President Hoover's veto.

Gauging the outlook, after the House had voted emphatically to set aside the Chief Executive's veto and make law the pending measure to give the Pacific dependency its independence after ten years, Senate sponsors of the bill were uncertain of commanding the votes necessary for similar action in this branch.

The Democratic controlled House earlier had smashed down with a vim upon Mr. Hoover's argument that the bill invited "grave dangers of foreign invasion and war." Within two hours from the time the President's veto message was received it voted 274 to 94 to override.

Democrat Backs Hoover.

One Democrat, Martin, of Oregon, former Army officer, joined 93 Republicans in an effort to sustain the President. This force fell short by 29 of attaining a third of those voting which would have killed the bill.

Holding their lines well, the Democrats mustered 191 and were joined by 83 Republicans, mostly from agricultural States and the one Farmer-Laborite, Kvale, of Minnesota.

Immediately after the House acted, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the Senate, announced he would ask for early consideration in his branch, which passed the bill without a record vote.

The Republican leader, Senator Robinson, of Indiana, urged that action be delayed until Monday and said he was confident the President's veto would be sustained. The delay until Monday was finally agreed to.

Shout Greets Result.

A great shout went up in the House when Speaker Garner announced the motion by Chairman Hare, of the Insular Affairs Committee, to override the veto had been carried. The Philippine Resident Commissioners Osias and Guevera were surrounded and cheered. It was several minutes before order was restored.

In vetoing the bill, which provides for a decade of economic and political adjustment prior to freedom, President Hoover said:

"This legislation puts both our people and the Philippine people not on

Mexico Hit

Bishop Protests Against Nation's Treatment of Catholics.

(Associated Press.)

An "emphatic protest" on behalf of the Catholic bishops of the United States against "the sustained persecution of the church in Mexico" was made public last night, signed by the Most Rev. Edward J. Hanna, Archbishop of San Francisco.

The statement was drawn up at the direction of the bishops at their recent annual meeting here and issued from the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Saying the church situation in Mexico is "a detriment to the amicable understanding and friendship that should exist between our own country and all the nations of both American continents," it added:

"The right of religious liberty, of freedom of worship, is native to the thought of our own country. We feel, therefore, we are justified in asking all our fellow citizens actively to interest themselves in the restoration in Mexico of religious freedom for its citizens."

FINISH FIGHT LOOMS ON CASH EXPANSION

Proponents of 2 Plans Prepare for Drive to Cheapen Golden Dollar.

(Associated Press.)

Sentiment in Congress for currency expansion to cheapen the gold dollar reached such heights yesterday that proponents of two plans to achieve that purpose prepared for a finish fight.

One group, originating in the so-called farm forum, comprising about 30 members, stood pledged to a measure which would provide a possible $3,000,000,000 expansion of the currency.

Another, led by Chairman Somers, of the House coinage committee, proposed to attain the equivalent to expansion by establishing an auxiliary monetary reserve of silver. Somers invited 50 bank presidents, economists and monetary experts to study his bill and tell his committee what they think of it.

The expansionists were members of a banking subcommittee of the forum that met Thursday night. They were reported to have approved a measure that would work this way:

The Treasury would issue $1,000,000,000 worth of bonds and turn them over to Federal Reserve banks. The banks in turn would issue $1,000,000,000 worth of currency, giving it to the Treasury, to be used in any way it chose.

Sixty days later, another $1,000,000,000 worth of currency would be issued and handled in the same manner. If at the end of 150 days the commodity price level had not reached 80 per cent of the average from 1921-29, a third $1,000,000,000 worth of currency would be issued.

Before this proposal can get far, its sponsors conceded, it must have the approval of members of the Farm Forum, and at a meeting of the forum last night the expansion plan was explained by its chief sponsors, Representatives Busby, of Mississippi, and Patman, of Texas, Democrats.

Some members of the forum banking committee, however, said they

Man and $50,000 In Drugs Captured

Jersey Detectives Say Prisoner Taken in Taxicab Attempted Bribery.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Three police detectives today arrested a man in whose baggage, they reported to Detective Capt. Patrick Brady, was found narcotics, they said, valued at $50,000. The detectives said the man told them he was George Klein, 29, of Chicago.

The man is being held at police headquarters on a charge of attempting bribery, preferred by three detectives, and Federal authorities were notified of his arrest and the seizure of the alleged narcotics.

The three detectives, on patrol duty at the Jersey City exit of the Holland Tunnel under the Hudson River, stated in their report they stopped on suspicion the taxicab carrying the man, and examined his large bag in which they stated they found the alleged contraband. After it was found, the man, they reported to Capt. Brady, offered them a bribe.

MAPES TAX BILL ACTION AGAIN IS SET AT CAPITOL

Capper's Committee Will Study D. C. Measure Wednesday.

VOTE THIS SESSION DECLARED UNLIKELY

Proposals Would Boost Local Levies by $4,000,000; Calendar Crowded.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Dormant for months, the Mapes $4,000,000 local tax program, which passed the House more than a year ago, is scheduled for revival next week before the Senate District committee, Chairman Arthur Capper disclosed last night.

His announcement followed calls at the Senate District committee room by Representative Carl F. Mapes (Republican), Michigan, author of the tax program, and Representative James A. Frear (Republican), Wisconsin, who aided in its drafting.

The two members failed to make connections with Senator Capper, but will try to see him today. Both said they intend to press for Senate action on the burdensome local legislation at this short session.

Committee Meets Wednesday.

Senator Capper said he will call a meeting of the Senate District Committee Wednesday and ask the group what it wants to do with the matter.

Senate leaders repeatedly have stated there will be no time on the heavily laden Senate calendar for controversial local legislation. Each day of the banking bill filibuster renders it less likely the Senate will pass any of the Mapes measures this session, even if the Senate District Committee reports them favorably.

Virtually every civic group in Washington has gone on record in opposition to the program, which strikes not only at local residents, but hits commuters from nearby States as well, with taxes levied on incomes earned in the District. One of the measures alone would boost 2 cents a gallon the local tax on gasoline. In addition, estate and automobile-weight taxes are proposed.

Old Organic Law.

Hearings on these bills, revised by the Bureau of Efficiency, were held last session by the Senate District Committee. The bureau has not yet reported on a fifth Mapes bill, providing for repeal of the old organic law under which Federal-District fiscal relations were placed on a 60—40 basis. Thomas P. Murphy, assistant chief of the bureau, yesterday said the report has been prepared and will be reported in a few days.

The program was approved last

Capt. H. M. Elmendorf Dies Testing New Ship Near Dayton.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—An Army plane described as the latest type for aerial warfare crashed in a test late today, killing one officer and seriously injuring another.

Capt. Hugh M. Elmendorf, attached to the office of the chief of the Army Air Corps in Washington, died instantly when he was thrown from the craft as it fell and burned near Byron, Ohio. Capt. Frank O'D. Hunter, of March Field, Riverside, Calif., was brought to a hospital here, where it was said he may live. Several ribs and possibly both legs were broken, attendants said.

The officers left Wright Field, Dayton, and had been in the air an hour when the plane went into a spin, Hunter said. They stayed with the ship, trying to right it, but when they dropped to 100 feet above the ground Hunter said he leaped out with his parachute. Why Elmendorf, who was piloting the plane, did not

THOMAS CARRIES ON IN BANK BILL FIGHT

One of Longest Filibusters for "Lame Ducks" Goes On in Senate.

(Associated Press.)

Gripped by the longest "lame duck" session filibuster in years, the Senate last night remained in control of a small group of opponents of the Glass banking reform bill prepared to carry on their opposition indefinitely.

Leaders hoped for a break yesterday—the fourth day of the blocking movement—but Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, took the floor at the outset and held it more than five hours, declaring the Nation has to come to "reflation" or face "repudiation and revolt."

Leaders of both sides canvassed prospects of getting action on the bill, but found them none too promising. They admitted it was doubtful if the drastic cloture rule could be invoked, since it requires a two-thirds majority.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, Republican leader, expressed belief the bill, branch banking provisions and all, could be passed if it came to a vote, but the little band of irreconcilables refused to yield an inch.

To observers of the four-day battle of parliamentary strategy between the Veteran Carter Glass, of Virginia, and

30,000 CHINESE STOP NIPPON JEHOL DRIVE

Surprise Counter-Offensive Carries Guerillas Far Into Manchuria.

Peiping, China, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A surprise counter-offensive checked the Japanese march on Jehol and carried the attacking Chinese column across the border deep into Manchuria, Chinese dispatches from various sectors along the front reported tonight.

The dispatches reported that 30,000 Chinese so-called guerilla raiders were harassing the Japanese supply trains and base camps along the great wall. The Chinese were jubilant and celebrated these victory reports as the turn of the tide and a definite check to the Japanese advance on Jehol Province.

The raiders, thousands mounted on the hardy little Mongolian ponies, moved swiftly against the Japanese infantry and heavy artillery units in the vicinity of Taonan, near the northwestern extremity of Jehol.

Guerillas, including detachments of the fighting "Big Swords," skirmished with Japanese forces defending bases, transports and communications from Taohan en route to Suichung, on the Jehol border 175 miles to the south.

The Chinese raiders under Gen. Feng Chan-Kai, supporting troops under Gen. Tang Yu-Lin, were credited with the first successful countermove halting the Japanese drive, at least temporarily.

Gen. Feng's men were reported to have crossed the Jehol border into Manchuria and pressed on toward the Japanese concentrations at Taonan. The move was declared by Chinese sources to have had the effect of blocking the column of Gen. Chang Hai-Pen, Manchoukuo troop leader, at Paitsanyingtze, in southern Jehol.

The raiders concentrated chiefly on harrying the Japanese-Manchoukuo flanks and disrupting communications, avoiding frontal clashes.

Meanwhile, Peiping and Tientsin and most of the area south of the Wall were reported generally quiet, and unaffected by outbreaks of the guerilla fighting outside the Wall.

Girl and Man Home Alive After Gangland Abduction

Chicagoan Shot in Back by Drunken Kidnapers, Who Gave $5 to Young Woman to Pay Her Taxicab Fare.

Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A man and a girl returned from a gangland "one-way ride" alive today, the man with a bullet wound in his back and the girl richer by $5 "cab fare home," handed her by one of three kidnapers.

Edward Morrissey, 36, soft drink stand operator, probably saved his life by "playing possum," and the girl, who gave her name as Jean Clark, 22, former actress, of Lexington, Ky., by fainting.

Both were picked up by a motorist early this morning near suburban Deerfield and taken to a hospital.

Morrissey, who declared he was the victim of mistaken identity, told his story from his hospital cot. He was called by telephone to meet a friend, "Jimmy," in the apartment building where Miss Clark resided, he said. As he entered the vestibule three men followed him. They began firing and one bullet struck him. The men dragged him into their waiting automobile. He "played" dead as they sped away.

His story was substantiated by a taxicab driver, Guy Fabbrocino. One of the gangsters fired at him as he sped away.

The girl said that about midnight she had put her fur coat over her pajamas and went out for a newspaper. As she was returning a car drew alongside of her and she was pulled into the front seat and told to be quiet. Then came the shooting. A man was dumped into the car. She, terrified, fainted as the driver started away.

When she came to, the car was out in the country. Their captors stopped, threw Morrissey out. One of them handed her five $1 bills, saying:

"Money for a taxicab home."

She said the trio was intoxicated.

CHAMBER ASKS $800,000,000 BUDGET SLASH

National Group Suggests Drastic Cut in U. S. Expenditure.

HOLDS IT MORE VITAL THAN MORE REVENUE

Asserts Maintenance of Federal Credit and Business Call for Sharp Action.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Describing the need for further drastic reduction in Federal expenditures as far more important than increased revenues, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States approved last night a voluminous report from its special committee of taxation recommending a net cut of $800,000,000 in the 1934 budget.

This figure compares with a net reduction of $478,000,000 recommended in President Hoover's annual budget message last month. Although detailed recommendations as to where the additional emergency economies should be made were withheld for a later report, the chamber's taxation committee suggested that its budget analysis demonstrated that even more than $800,000,000 might be saved through slashing the appropriation bills now in the legislative mill.

Double Need Stressed.

The urgent need for some serious effort to achieve a balanced budget for the fiscal year 1934 was described by the committee as necessary both for the preservation of the national credit on a high plane and for the stimulation of business recovery.

The taxation committee, headed by former Gov. Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, included representatives of every branch of American industry, including agriculture. The report was approved by a unanimous vote of both the committee and the chamber's directorate.

Pointing out that huge blocs of Federal obligations are approaching maturity during the next 18 months, the report warned that the availability of refinancing funds would be determined in a degree by the management of national fiscal operations in the present session of Congress. An immediate halt to the steady increase in the national debt was demanded as a "prerequisite to an orderly arrangement of the finances of the Government, the maintenance of its credit on a high plane and the improvement of economic conditions."

Heavy Refunding Near.

"Large refunding operations shortly must be undertaken," the report continued. "A proper balance between receipts and expenditures will have a decided influence upon the rates of interest that the Government must pay. In turn, the rates of interest upon Government securities will de-

Federal Salary Saving Will Go to Military Officers, Collins Charges.

Every cent of saving claimed for the 1 2-3 per cent additional Federal pay cut will be eaten up in pay raises authorized Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers under the Senate economy committee's report, Representative Ross A. Collins (Democrat), Texas, chairman of House War Department appropriations subcommittee, declared last night.

Representative Collins said he will take the floor if the provision comes back from the Senate in the Treasury-Postoffice bill and "expose" the situation.

"It narrows down to the fact that the rank and file of Government employes in Washington, whose salaries will be cut an additional 1 2-3 per cent, will pay for fat pay increases given uniformed officers under the proposal to remove the ban on automatic promotions," he said.

He said senators "who like to purr around in high Army and Navy official circles" will support the provision.

The Senate economy committee provision referred to by Representative Collins also would operate to remove the ban on promotions of District school teachers, police and firemen, and certain postal employes.

ROOSEVELT TO SEE CONGRESS LEADERS

Will Stop Here Thursday and Friday on Way to Georgia.

(Associated Press.)

Pressing legislative problems and the growing probability of an extra session of the new Congress are to be the subject of a series of conferences next Thursday and Friday between President-elect Roosevelt and Democratic congressional leaders.

Mr. Roosevelt plans a two-day visit here en route to Warm Springs, Ga., where he will spend some time constructing his cabinet and otherwise preparing to take over the administration March 4.

Speaker Garner yesterday said he would confer with the incoming executive during his stay here. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader, and ranking members on important committees also are to discuss the legislative situation with the President-elect.

James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, who is almost certain to be appointed Postmaster General, is expected to accompany Mr. Roosevelt, but to remain here some time after the conferences.

One of the subjects sure to be discussed is the problem of balnacing the budget. Democratic leaders are still trying to get their beer bill through the Senate and to the President, as well as their economy proposals.

Dependent upon these and the action of the farm relief bill, sent to the Senate by the House, is the possibility of a meeting of the new Congress about April 12. If action is expected, however, the Democrats plan to go ahead with their proposals to

Hoover Plans Year Of Rest, Staff Says

White House aids announced yesterday President Hoover intended to "rest for at least a year" after being relieved by Franklin D. Roosevelt n March 4.

One of the President's secretaries told newspapermen this morning that while Mr. Hoover undoubtedly would spend some time in putting into shape the documents he has assembled during his long career of public service, he had no intention of writing a book or history.

FEDERAL SETUP CHANGES SAVED FOR ROOSEVELT

House Democrats Vote to Turn Down Plan of Hoover.

INCOMING PRESIDENT TO GET MORE POWER

Cochran's Resolution Voices Blankest Disapproval of Executive's Proposals.

By J. BERNARD McDONNELL.

House Democrats, in party caucus yesterday, turned thumbs down on President Hoover and voted to reserve to Mr. Roosevelt, their own party leader, who will assume office as Chief Magistrate March 4, the prerogatives of revising the Federal executive machinery.

Decision of the Democratic caucus rang the death knell of the 58 proposals by President Hoover for merger and transfer of various governmental agencies under authority granted him by the last session of Congress.

Disapproval of the changes was expressed in a resolution which was prepared by Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the House committee on expenditures in executive departments. The Cochran resolution expressed blanket disapproval of all of the changes proposed by President Hoover. Under authority, which prompted the President to issue his tentative orders, disapproval by either House or Senate within 60 days would nullify all or any one of the orders.

Becomes Party Issue.

Special parliamentary status is to be given to the disapproving Cochran resolution under a special rule from the powerful rules committee. That rule will not permit of amendment. The resolution will be voted up or down. It will be taken up after the House has concluded consideration of the War Department appropriation bill. So far there has been no formal action on the Cochran resolution in the House, but the decision of the Democratic caucus yesterday binds the controlling, though slim Democratic majority in the House to vote for it, and the Democrats probably will find a few extra Republican votes, although the caucus has made it a party issue.

Despite reports that blanket authority to revise, change and perhaps cancel Governmental agencies would be embodied in one or another of the appropriation bills at this session, House leaders are disinclined to agree to that program. They do not want to take any chances. Several are of the belief that the entire question should be left for consideration by the new Congress, which is expected to be called into extra session in April.

The question will come to issue in the Senate in the course of its consideration of the Treasury-Postoffice Departments appropriation bill. Senator James Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who is one of those who are supposed to be close to President-elect Roosevelt, introduced the

THOUSANDS TO GET JOBS IN NEW LOANS

Puerto Rico, Texas, Florida and California Share in R. F. C. Advances.

(Associated Press.)

Loans totaling $2,272,372 to provide work for thousands of men were authorized late yesterday by the Reconstruction Corporation directors, including one advance for relief and seven for self-liquidating projects.

The board loaned $281,372 to California to help that State maintain its labor camps for transient unemployed men who are cared for on the "no work, no eat" plan at camps on the snow line of the mountains.

The other loans included $1,300,000 to San Juan, Puerto Rico, for completing its waterworks system; $550,000 to the University of Colorado for construction of a dormitory for 300 girls; $40,000 to the Reeves County Water Improvement District No. 1 of Balmorhea, Tex., for repairing its irrigation system; $15,000 to the Fabens (Tex.) Water Co. for extending the city water system; $20,000 to the Riverton (Utah) Pipe Line Co. for building a reservoir; $16,000 to Quincy, Fla., for improving its water system, and $50,000 to Pensacola, Fla., for improving its water system.

All of the self-liquidating loans bear 6 per cent interest except the University of Colorado loan and that to Quincy, Fla., with the possible exception of San Juan, which is given the choice of issuing either 6 per cent bonds based on water revenues or 5 per cent general city obligation bonds.

The San Juan loan is designed to improve fire-fighting facilities through installation of 400 fire plugs and 15,000 meters and to stop leakage throughout the system. The job will employ 430 men for 18 months. The Buckayanbo filter works is to be enlarged to 12,000,000 gallons storage capacity.

The corporation board attached to the two loans two conditions. One is that the city council shall adopt an ordinance pledging itself to keep 90 per cent of the water consumption of the city on meters after July 1, 1934, and the other that a leakage survey be made.

Approximately $800,000 worth of supplies and equipment are to be purchased and must be bought in the United States.

DRASTIC BUDGET CUT ASKED BY CHAMBER

termine to a considerable extent the willingness of industry to offer, and the market to absorb, private issues to refund existing debt and to acquire new capital."

In supporting the recent decision of the Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee to postpone tax measures until the total of next year's economies can be known, the chamber's report warned that any increase in Federal levies at this time must be regarded as unwelcome and unduly burdensome to some section of the population.

The report did not mention the stand taken recently by the Senate Democrats, with which House leaders of the party are in accord, but it emphasized repeatedly the committee's preference for economies rather than new revenues.

"Increases in the rate of income taxes, or other taxes now being levied, or the addition of the manufacturers sales tax or other new forms of levies, with the possible exception of the beer tax, in the present short session of Congress are unwarranted," the report said. "Instead, economies should be effected."

Foreign Debt Defaults.

The report also directed the attention of Congress to the fact that $328,000,000 on foreign debt payments carried among the income items on the Treasury's budget summary may not be forthcoming next year. This item alone, therefore, would more than wipe out the balance achieved by a net reduction of $800,000,000 in the 1934 appropriations.

In his message last month, President Hoover pointed to prospective 1934 deficit of $307,000,000—after net reductions of $478,000,000 in expenditures. Further economies of $322,000,000 would be required to bring the net reduction to $800,000,000. On paper, this would balance the 1934 budget without new taxes of any sort—save for the item of $328,000,000 due from foreign governments.

"Such a reduction of $800,000,000, combined with the levy of the beer tax alone would permit the dropping or reduction of the gasoline tax next June and the reduction of some of the other emergency taxes, if full receipts on account of scheduled foreign payments are included," the committee report said.

were willing to go any lengths to achieve currency expansion.

There were indications that they might join forces with some senators, including Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, who has threatened to block other legislation unless the currency is expanded.

Somers, insisting that currency inflation "like that practiced in Germany is unsound," went ahead with plans for the study of his measure. Although dates for his committee's hearings have not been set, he said in a statement they would begin "in the near future."

"I am not trying to put something over for silver," he told newspapermen. "But we have got to make the value of gold decrease. If establishing a monetary reserve of silver will do it, and the currency inflation methods proposed are unsound, then let's use silver."

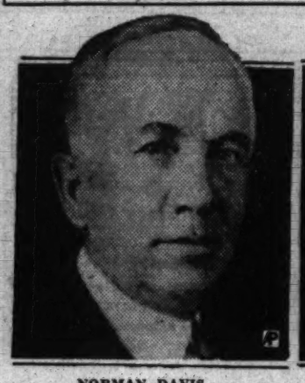
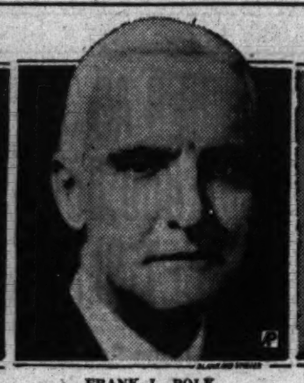
No. 1—The State Department



NORMAN DAVIS.



FRANK L. POLK.

NEWTON D. BAKER.

This is the first of a series of seven daily articles dealing with the task of Cabinet-making now confronting President-elect Roosevelt. Each outlines the requirements of the various posts and lists some of the men mentioned in connection with them.

By KIRKE SIMPSON.
(Associated Press.)

On the shoulders of the man President Roosevelt appoints forty-eighth Secretary of State and highest ranking member of his Cabinet will fall a double burden.

Not only will he find awaiting him on his desk at the State Department vital questions of international relationships left over by the outgoing administration, but to him also will be intrusted the initiation of diplomatic steps to make effective the regime of reciprocal tariffs to which the new President and his party stand committed.

The President-elect has guarded closely his own thoughts as to the man to whom he will commit this double task.

The names of such Democratic great men as John W. Davis, former Presidential nominee and one-time Ambassador to the Court of St. James; of Newton D. Baker, war-time Secretary of War; of former Undersecretary of State Frank L. Polk and his successor in that office, Norman Davis, present special representative of the Hoover administration abroad in matters relating to disarmament negotiations, all have been put forward in public discussion.

Mr. Roosevelt has evidenced no reaction to such suggestions. Yet under theories of Cabinet-making attributed to Mr. Roosevelt the Secretary of State he selects must be a man able to aid in effecting party solidarity in Congress behind administration foreign policy as well as one equipped for highest diplomatic service in contact with foreign statesmen and diplomats.

Aside from pioneering ground long unfamiliar to American diplomacy in the proposed substitution of negotiated tariffs for the 30 or more existing most-favored-nation commercial treaties, the new Secretary of State will have passed on to him by Secretary Stimson such weighty unfinished business as the Far Eastern crisis, blazing up anew week by week as fresh clashes come between Chinese and Japanese forces.

The Hoover doctrine of nonrecognition of the new state of Manchukuo as created by Japanese aid in alleged defiance of the nonaggression commitments of the antiwar pact and the nine-power treaty must be dealt with.

To the south among neighbor republics armed clashes and rumors of wars continue against every neutral effort to solve boundary and other disputes by negotiation. Governments and ministries topple overnight, each presenting its own special problem for the American Secretary of State.

In Europe, the tangle over war debt payment and the default of France and some other debtors present an added factor of diplomatic discord, while the world disarmament movement initiated belatedly at Geneva moves slowly along as unfinished business.

In the immediate offing looms the world economic parley and the necessity of selecting American representation and shaping American proposals on each complicated aspect to be touched upon.

The new Secretary of State will be the eighth Democrat to hold that office since the war between the States. To none of his predecessors in office except during the World War have such profound, difficult problems been presented as will face the man President-elect Roosevelt names for the post.

Tasks That Are Handled By Secretary of State

Holds highest rank in Cabinet.

Deals with foreign powers and their envoys; directs American envoys abroad.

Conducts correspondence between the President and governors of the various States.

Issues officially constitutional amendments, laws and resolutions of Congress and proclamations admitting new States into the Union.

Grants passports to travelers and permission to foreign consuls to serve in the United States.

Serves as official custodian of treaties with other nations, the seal attached thereto, laws of the United States and various official documents.

Tomorrow—The Treasury Department.

REPUBLICANS PLAN TO KILL FARM BILL

Senate Democrats Hope to Put Allotment Measure on Floor Soon.

(Associated Press.)

A sentence-by-sentence revision of the new domestic allotment farm relief bill—or its outright defeat—was predicted by Senate Republican leaders last night as Democratic chieftains conferred on the whole field of agricultural aid, particularly the mortgage problem.

Sentiment on the Democrat-sponsored bill already approved by the House cut sharply across party lines, but the Democratic leadership expressed a desire to get the measure quickly to the Senate floor so that it might be acted upon. Its consideration by the Agriculture Committee was scheduled for Monday morning.

In an informal but significant conference attended by President-elect Roosevelt's foremost adviser on farm matters, leading Democrats from both houses of Congress put their heads together on agricultural matters.

The chief subject of their earnest discussion was how best to help the farmer who is faced with mortgage foreclosure and loss of his home.

Much of the talking was done by Henry Morgenthau, of New York, publisher of the American Agriculturist, who was chairman of Gov. Roosevelt's agricultural advisory commission and is understood to reflect his views on the subject.

After the conference, several senators who participated asserted that unless Congress acts at this session to relieve farmers who are about to be foreclosed, a serious situation will result. There was no unanimity, however, on detailed legislation. Several measures with farm mortgage relief as their object are pending before Senate committees.

Little was said about the new domestic allotment bill at the conference, as senators present felt they had not had sufficient time to study it.

Among those present at the meeting in the office of Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, were Speaker Garner, Representative Jones (Democrat), Texas, House sponsor of the bill; Representative Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, and a group of senators which included Robinson, Harrison of Mississippi, Hull of Tennessee and Barkley of Kentucky.

WINE NOW INCLUDED IN SENATE BEER BILL

Subcommittee Reduces Alcoholic Content in Draft for Judiciary Group.

(Associated Press.)

Fortified against constitutional assault by a reduced alcoholic content and broadened to include wine, the House beer bill last night awaited action by the Senate Judiciary Committee after receiving subcommittee approval.

Determined to bring the measure safely within the limitations of the eighteenth amendment, the latter group redrafted the bill almost in its entirety and cut the House's 3.2 per cent maximum alcoholic content to 3.05. The lower figure would amount to 3.8 by volume instead of the 4 per cent voted by the House.

With Senate Democrats united in supporting the bill and optimistic that it will be passed, the measure will come to its next test on Monday in a vote by the committee proper. Its members are favorably disposed, but the measure, nevertheless, must weather a storm of controversy before it can become law.

Definition Is Avoided.

The subcommittee eliminated any effort at definition of an intoxicating beverage. It proposed, instead, to limit the penalties of the Volstead law to malt or vinous beverages of more than 3.05 per cent. No change would be made in the Volstead limitation of one-half of 1 per cent on distilled liquors.

Wine was placed in the same category with beer and limited to 3.05 per cent alcoholic content. Senator Dill (Republican), Washington, who sponsored this change, predicted it would result in raising more revenue.

Committee Works Fast.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Blaine, Wisconsin Republican, showed the same speed in dealing with the beer bill that it employed in drafting the prohibition repeal resolution now pending before the Senate.

The new bill was drafted at three executive sessions, held on successive days, which approaches a record for speed in dealing with the prohibition controversy.

Blaine announced the vote in the subcommittee was 4 to 1 for the bill, with only Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, opposing, though several members made reservations on specific amendments.

TARIFF DATA ACTION UP TO G. O. P. GROUP

Resolution to Provide Report for Roosevelt Is Before Senate Body.

(Associated Press.)

A Senate committee weighted with a technical Republican majority last night was charged with the next move in the Democratic effort to provide President-elect Roosevelt with data to aid in framing a tariff-bargaining policy.

Referred to the finance committee immediately, the resolution of Costigan, of Colorado, asking the Tariff Commission for all information available will face the scrutiny of such Republican high tariff advocates as Smoot, of Utah; Watson, of Indiana, and Reed, of Pennsylvania.

Across the table, seeking favorable action to carry the measure to the floor, will be two leading Democratic tariff exponents—Harrison, of Mississippi, and Hull, of Tennessee.

Although the commission carries the Republican majority of ten to nine, on the ranking side sits Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, who threw his support during the November campaign to the President-elect, whose policies the legislation is intended to further.

The Costigan resolution demanded reports to Congress during February containing all information in Government files bearing on the proposed tariff bargaining policy which Gov. Roosevelt has intimated he will follow.

The resolution specified that these reports will be available to the public and should be "in a form useful to the incoming recently elected Chief Executive."

Senator Costigan pointed out that under the laws information of the Tariff Commission is not available to the President-elect, and that unless Congress acts he must wait to take office before getting access to these data.

"It is highly proper," he said, "that the present Senate should take time by the forelock for the use of the next administration."

BLACK ASKS GUARD TO ATTEND HEARINGS

Tiff Between A. F. L. Agent and League Leader Is Cause of Request.

(Associated Press.)

A new altercation before a Senate committee between an alleged Communist and a representative of the American Federation of Labor yesterday brought a request from Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, for the presence of a sergeant at arms at future hearings on his five-day week bill.

W. C. Hushing, legislative agent of the federation, and Bill Dunne, representing the Trade Union Unity League of New York, were the principals.

Hushing reiterated a statement he made Thursday that Dunne was a Communist representing Soviet Russia, and that his organization was using Senate committees as "sounding boards" to poison the minds of the workers.

When Hushing finished after repeated warnings from Chairman Norris to stick to the subject of the hearing, Dunne jumped up and over the protest of Norris proceeded to enter categorical denials of Hushing's charges.

A similar incident took place Thursday between the two men.

"I request the right to enter a formal denial of these charges, Dunne shouted.

"No, not here," Norris began. "I don't think——"

"I can't help that," Dunne went on. "I've been charged with being a representative of Soviet Russia and as favoring the overthrow of government, which is tantamount to treason."

Steamship Captain Suspended by U. S.

Posey's Vessel, District of Columbia, Hit Another at Old Point Comfort.

(Associated Press.)

The steamboat inspection service yesterday announced the suspension of Capt. Frederick A. Posey, of the steamer District of Columbia, as the result of the collision of that vessel with the motor ship Yomachichi at Old Point Comfort, Va., November 29. The suspension is for 30 days, effective January 16.

The announcement was made by Director Pickerson N. Hoover, of the steamboat inspection service, upon receiving the decision of the local inspectors at Norfolk who heard the case.

Posey was charged with "reckless navigation and inattention to duty." The local inspectors, J. E. Tarkenton and C. P. Etheridge, said in the decision Posey's long period of service was taken into consideration and that they desired to "temper justice with mercy."

Florida Fog Ends Flight to Capital

Mattern Forced Down at Daytona Beach and Plane Damaged.

Daytona Beach, Fla., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Fog and motor trouble today caused Pilot James Mattern, of Fort Worth, Tex., to make a forced landing on the beach here, while en route from Miami to Washington. Mattern and his companion, Jack Clark, of Chicago, were not injured, but their plane, after landing, was damaged when it was knocked over by wind and high waves.

The pilot was flying to Washington to confer with Secretary Hurley regarding a Congressional Medal to be awarded for the transatlantic flight Mattern and Capt. Bennett Griffin made last summer.

After the accident Mattern said he was undecided as to whether he would remain here to supervise repairs to the plane or continue north by train.

4 Colorado Sheepmen Accused in U. S. Fraud

Denver, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Four sheepmen of Cedar City, Utah, were named in Federal indictments returned here today, charging they obtained illegal possession of 15,000 acres in Garfield County, Colo., by employing more than a score of "dummies" to file on the land under the homestead laws.

Those named are Dr. Arnold Lamar Graff, Dr. James S. Prestwich, Layron Williams and Nelpher Graff. The Government charged they grazed their sheep and benefited to the extent of thousands of dollars at the expense of the Government.

Charles Stanley Keller Succumbs at San Diego

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Commander Charles Stanley Keller, 48, executive officer at the naval training station here, died today of a heart attack.

A native of Pennsylvania, he was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1908. Before coming here for duty in 1930, he commanded the naval tanker Kanawha. He is survived by his wife.

Fliers Postpone Buenos Aires Hop.

Istres, France, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Lucien Bossoutrot and Maurice Rossi, holders of the world closed circuit flying record of 6,360 miles, decided today to postpone a projected nonstop flight to Buenos Aires until later because of unfavorable weather reports. The French fliers hoped to set a world distance record of 6,500 miles in the flight to South America.

The committee, headed by Senator Howell (Republican), Nebraska, has been inquiring into the election in Louisiana last November, in which Representative John H. Overton defeated Senator Broussard in his fight for reelection. Overton was indorsed by Senator Long.

Word of Kreuger's Suicide Is Backed

"Match King's" Secretary Says Reported Delay Claim Unfounded.

Paris, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Ivar Kreuger, late Swedish "match king," died the day his suicide in Paris was announced and not the day before, his private secretary declared today, denying charges introduced in the Senate's Wall street inquiry at Washington. The secretary, Baron Drachenfels, now living in Paris, said, following reports of the Senate charges:

"It is a positive fact that Kreuger died at 1 p. m. Saturday, March 12, and his suicide was discovered two hours later by a maid. That was 3 p. m. here in Paris, or 10 a. m. in New York. I spoke to him several times on the evening of Friday, March 11, and, furthermore, I can name many persons who telephoned to him the morning of the 12th."

Kreuger's associates believe the 160,000 shares of Kreuger & Toll stock were unloaded in New York's Stock Exchange telegraphically from Paris between the time of his suicide and the Wall street closing at noon of that Saturday, last March 12. All the shares, they said, were sold through two Paris branches of American brokers.

King to Push Bill To Curb Bondsmen

Utah Senator Will Press for House Approval of His Measure.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, author of the King bill for regulating the practices of local bondsmen, yesterday said he will press for House approval of the measure, in a letter to John P. Mullen, local attorney.

The Senate passed the bill last week, and Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, chairman of the House District Judiciary subcommittee, said he plans early House hearings on the measure.

Mullen, who assisted The Post in a campaign for the legislation, assured the attorney he will not object to any changes tightening the provisions of the bill. Mullen intends to ask the Palmisano subcommittee to put "teeth" in the measure to prevent bondsmen from soliciting business for local lawyers.

Thomas Denies British Let Irish Issue "Slide"

London, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—J. H. Thomas, Dominions secretary, today denied that the British government was making no serious effort to settle the controversy with the Irish Free State because it hoped the De Valera government would be defeated at the polls January 24. Statements to this effect have been made in the course of the election campaign now going on in the Free State.

Mr. Thomas, in a speech delivered in Monmouthshire, also denied allegations that while he was at the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference last summer he predicted that there would be civil war in the Free State within two months.

U. S. Guards Reinforced To Prevent Sabotage

Additional guards have been placed on incompleted Government buildings to guard against any possibility of sabotage. This is the result of the recent fire which swept the top floor of the new Interstate Commerce Commission Building.

Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber does not believe this fire was of incendiary origin, while others think it was. Both construction and Government officials agree that the working dispute between the hoisting engineers and the elevator construction unions had no connection with the blaze.

Federal Home Banks Planning Bond Issue

(Associated Press.)

The prospect that the Federal Home Loan Bank System may soon issue bonds to raise additional money was indicated yesterday by Franklin W. Fort, chairman of the board, who said that one bank already had extended credit exceeding its capital stock.

The twelve regional banks of the system were capitalized at $124,000,000 and when that amount has been loaned it will be necessary to raise additional money through bonds. The Indianapolis bank, which has a capital of $8,000,000, has approved credit amounting to more than that sum.

R. F. C. Is Warned Of Unsound Loans

President of Engineering Council Says Body Is Well Handled.

Many of the projects which are being placed before the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as self-liquidating are "unsound and are promotion schemes," W. S. Lee, president of the American Engineering Council, told that body yesterday.

He urged that the council assist the corporation in selecting the right projects and declared that the plan of the finance corporation "is a most excellent one," if properly handled.

Mr. Lee is vice president of the Duke Power Co., of Charlotte, N. C.

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation," he declared, "is, in the nature of things, very closely tied up with the engineering profession, especially upon the construction program. If this program, without cooperation, can be handled successfully, it will be to the very great advantage of the American people and of the American engineering fraternity. On the other hand, if it all comes to an unsuccessful ending, it will be one of the greatest blows that could befall our fraternity."

Mr. Lee emphasized the difficulty of finding "sound, self-liquidating projects."

Cruiser Indianapolis Arrives in New York

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The new 10,000-ton cruiser, Indianapolis, recently placed in commission at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, arrived in New York Harbor today and anchored in the Hudson River off Ninety-sixth street.

The ship will remain until Monday, when she will be taken out for another trial run between Newport, R. I., and Hampton Roads, Va.

Red Cross in Need of More Federal Cotton for Relief

Chairman Payne Confers With President and Says Four Million Persons Have Received Clothing Made Up by Society's Chapters.

Additional supplies of Farm Board cotton for distribution to the needy could well be handled by the American Red Cross this winter, its chairman, John Barton Payne, told newspapermen at the White House yesterday following a conference with President Hoover. Judge Payne did not say, however, whether the subject had been discussed with the President.

In summarizing the relief afforded throughout the country by Government wheat and cotton during the last eighteen months, Judge Payne said that approximately 4,500,000 families had received Red Cross flour, and that about 4,000,000 persons had received various items of clothing made from the free cotton. The distribution was through the Red Cross chapters throughout the country.

"There are 3,074 counties in the United States," Judge Payne continued, "and only 116 of them have not applied for assistance."

Asked why these counties had not been supplied, he said many of them were sparsely populated sections of the mountainous West. He continued:

"Two or three of them are in the Great Salt Lake. Several more are in the deserts. Some are the high counties in the Rocky Mountains, where there is virtually no population."

He added that Reconstruction Finance Corporation relief loans had lightened the Red Cross' burden, notably during the last half year, but that demands for additional clothing still were urgent. He suggested that approximately 329,000 bales still held by the Cotton Stabilization Corporation would carry the work through the winter.

House Quiz Is Tuesday On District Beer Bill

Hearings on the Black beer bill, authorizing controlled sale of 3.2 per cent beer in the District, will be held at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning before the House District Judiciary Subcommittee, Chairman Vincent L. Palmisano, announced yesterday.

A number of dry organizations, including the Antisaloon League, have indicated their intention of sending witnesses before the committee. Representative Palmisano, who favors the legislation, said he will ask each of the witnesses to explain why the District should not be allowed the same privileges as the States if the Collier national beer bill becomes law.

Fish Urges Strong Man For Cuban Ambassador

(Associated Press.)

Appointment of a "strong ambassador" to Cuba, who "would clean up the mess that prevails there" was advocated yesterday by Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., who Thursday introduced a resolution calling on the President to use his influence to "restore civil rights" in the island.

Fish (Republican), New York, told newspapermen that a man "like Dwight Morrow" could straighten things out in Cuba in a very brief period. He said he was not criticizing Ambassador Guggenheim, but "said he lacks influence."

Hines Exaggerates, Senator Declares

Walsh Calls Figures About Veterans' Costs Billion and Half Too High.

(Associated Press.)

A charge that Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, "Grossly exaggerated" some estimates of future veterans' expenditures was put before the Joint Congressional Veterans Committee yesterday by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, a member.

Walsh said the exaggeration "in one case amounted to $1,500,000,000," but as Gen. Hines gave the figures to the committee in an executive session he declined to say definitely what item was involved.

It was indicated, however, that Gen. Hines had estimated the peak of expenditures for World War veterans would reach approximately $3,000,000,000 a year, within the next 15 years, and that he had subsequently told Walsh, in answer to a question of the senator some days later, that this peak would be around $1,500,000,000.

Arkansas House Votes Down Repeal Resolution

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Prohibition repeal advocates lost their first fight in the Arkansas House of Representatives today, but promised the drys another over a bill which was introduced to permit sale of light wines and beer by county dispensary boards. Another bill offered today seeks repeal of the 90-day divorce law of 1931.

A resolution to memoralize Congress to speed up its eighteenth amendment repeal resolution was tabled by the House, 78 to 16, without debate, but its author, Representative Stanfield, of Garland County, said it was introduced merely as a "feeler."

Brookhart Is Reported Recovering at Hospital

(Associated Press.)

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, was described yesterday as apparently on the road to recovery from an illness which has confined him to Walter Reed Hospital for more than a month.

His condition at one time was so serious that his son, Smith W. Brookhart, jr., stayed with him day and night. The senator, who hopes to resume his duties before many days, caught cold before the present session.

(Associated Press.)

Martin as his first major economy move. The reductions, the governor said, will become effective January 15, and will range from 10 to 25 per cent.

The salary cuts ordered today, the governor explained, were preliminary to a complete revision of salary and wage scales for State employes.

2 POLICEMEN JAILED IN BIG KIDNAP PLOT

Pair Indicted With 3 Others in 100,000 New York Ransom Demand.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Two policemen and three other men, one a former convict, were arrested in simultaneous raids today, charged with a daring kidnaping in the Federal Court Building in Brooklyn.

In a few hours the five had been indicted on charges of kidnaping and second degree assault, arraigned before a county judge who held them in $75,000 bail each, and taken to the Brooklyn City prison when they were unable to raise bail.

The carefully timed arrests disclosed for the first time the kidnaping itself—an audacious plot in which Ernest Schoenig, of Pleasantville, N. J., was spirited away from the Federal Building December 27, held until January 10 under demands for $100,000 ransom, but finally was released without any payment money.

Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan told assembled detectives that the police had a "100 per cent case" against all five men. But he talked mostly of the two officers.

Resists Arrest Violently.

"These men," he shouted as he glared at the accused policemen, "are worse than sewer rats coming from their holes covered with slime. This department has no place for men like them. They are an unqualified disgrace to us."

Of the two, Arthur B. Graef has been in the police department eleven years, and John Nevins five years. Graef put up such a fight when he was arrested that the bannisters on the stairway in his home were broken. He submitted to arrest only after fellow officers told him he would be taken to headquarters "dead or alive."

Served in Sing Sing.

The other prisoners were Frank Miller, a clerk, who has been arrested twenty times and who has served a term in Sing Sing Prison; Max Geller, a seamon, and Leonard Gawelczyk, a chauffeur.

Police said Geller and Gawelczyk had made complete confessions, implicating the three others as well as themselves, and that Schoenig had identified all five.

As told by the police, the story of the kidnaping and its developments was as follows:

Liquor Case Witness.

On December 27 Schoenig appeared as a witness in a liquor case in Federal court in Brooklyn. As he left the courtroom he was met in the corridor by Patrolmen Graef and Nevins, told that he was wanted in another case and taken to the street and into an automobile. The other three men were in the car.

First they took him to a garage in Brooklyn, then gave him a pair of glasses, the lenses of which had been taped, and ordered him to wear them. He was taken to a vacant apartment in Manhattan and held there until his release. On three occasions he was forced to write letters to his wife requesting payment of $100,000 ransom. Geller and Gawelczyk stood guard over him. Finally, on January 10, the two officers came and ordered his release.

"We can't get any money," they were quoted as saying. "There's no use holding him any longer."

AS FIREMEN FOUGHT BALTIMORE BLAZE

Scene of the 1912 convention in which Woodrow Wilson was nominated for the Presidency, the Baltimore Fifth Regiment Armory was completely destroyed by fire early yesterday. Only granite walls withstood the flames and a desperate fight had to be waged to keep the fire from ammunition stored in the basement. A 30-mile wind started other blazes.

BALTIMORE HOLDS FUTILE FIRE PROBE

Soldiers Guard Armory Ruin; Incendiarism Doubted; Walls Condemned.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 13.—While soldiers stood guard over the ruins of the Fifth Regiment Armory tonight, fruitless probes were being conducted to determine the origin of the blaze which early today caused a damage estimated at between $750,000 and $1,000,000.

Only $500,000 of this was covered by insurance, according to the office of the State treasurer, exclusive of $66,000 insurance on the actual contents.

William A. Parr, building engineer, tonight said his inspectors condemned the walls, which are badly bulged and will eventually have to be torn down, although there is no immediate danger of them collapsing.

Mr. Parr said further that electrical inspectors had gone over the wiring of the building yesterday to check repairs which had been made since the fire in the armory August 30. The findings, he declared, were satisfactory and conformed to all regulations.

Capt. Charles H. Burns, head of the Detective Bureau, who is in charge of the police investigation, asserted he had no reason to suspect incendiarism, but that Detective Lieuts. Joseph Itzel and John Krats, assigned to the case, would continue work.

Other investigations are being made by the salvage corps and officers of the Maryland National Guard. Chief Edward Warr, of the salvage corps, declared he was under the impression that the fire was not of an incendiary nature.

Gov. Ritchie this afternoon spent more than an hour viewing the wreckage. He will confer with Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland, and Col. Washington Bowie, commander of the Fifth Regiment, on plans of erecting a new structure. An appropriation bill may be introduced at the present session of the Legislature.

With 11 alarms being sounded, 48 pieces of fire apparatus and nearly 400 firemen were called out. The equipment at the scene included 34 engine companies, 11 truck, one hose company, one water tower and one chemical truck. Six men were injured.

Six companies were on patrol duty all day due to the quantity of embers carried over the southwestern section of the city by a strong northeast wind. The roof of a house two and a half blocks away was ignited by one of these sparks. About 70 families were aroused.

Tonight only the thick granite walls, among which the flames raged for hours, remained of the 30-year-old building where Woodrow Wilson was nominated for President in 1912 and Franklin D. Roosevelt ended his Southern presidential tour last fall.

The armory was built in 1903 from an original appropriation of $420,000. It was dedicated on May 11 that year at ceremonies attended by representatives of the Army and Navy and various military organizations throughout the country.

The danger from explosion of the large amount of ammunition stored in the basement threatened throughout the fire. An effort to carry it out, after a hole had been broken in the wall, was futile so firemen laid several lines and flooded the cellar.

BLACKMAIL COUPLE GIVEN THREE YEARS

Mother of Six and Accomplice Convicted of Plot at Harrisonburg.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Laura Lam, 48, mother of six children, and Robert Craig, 25, both of western Rockingham, were found guilty of extortion in Circuit Court here late today, and each sentenced to three years in the State Penitentiary.

This was the first case of its character ever tried here and the courtroom was thronged with spectators throughout the trial. The jury deliberated one hour.

Mrs. Lam and Craig admitted sending a letter to Charles Williams, local chain store manager, demanding that he meet them with $250. Williams went to the appointed place after notifying police. Officers pounced on Mrs. Lam and Craig just as Williams handed over a package supposed to contain the money.

Craig contended he had no part in the crime other than that he wrote the letter and delivered it for Mrs. Lam. The woman contended that Williams had made improper advances to her when she delivered eggs at his apartment last June. Williams denied the charge.

The defense contended that the letter was not a threatening one and Mrs. Lam had it written to inform Williams that he must pay her damages for the alleged attack or she would "expose him."

Mrs. Lam was sentenced to 60 days in jail this week on a prohibition count. She was out on bail at the time and said she had to sell liquor to support her children.

ROOSEVELT WEIGHS UNEMPLOYED ISSUE

President-Elect Working to Get Idle Off "Dole;" Swanson Present.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The problem of getting America's millions of unemployed off relief rolls and back to work rolled prominently across the busy conference table of President-elect Roosevelt today.

Before returning here tonight for a week-end at the quiet Hyde Park estate, Mr. Roosevelt, at New York, gave unemployment particular attention in a wide range of discussions.

"The quicker we get people back to work and off of relief demands the better it will be," he told newspapermen. "We are working hard toward that end, but it is a great task and can not, of course, be fully accomplished overnight."

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston brought up the unemployment problem, calling the President-elect's attention to the growing size of charity budgets which he insisted now almost amounted to a dole.

Just before leaving New York Mr. Roosevelt conferred at length with Senator Swanson, of Virginia, ranking member of the foreign relations committee. Strict secrecy surrounded this parley.

Swanson, a member of the American arms delegation to Geneva, said he was uncertain whether he would return to that meeting. Significance was attached to the Swanson conference in connection with the foreign relations discussions held by the President-elect early this week, but neither would go into detail.

The Virginia senator also has been mentioned as a likely member of the Roosevelt Cabinet, either in the State, War or Navy posts.

Mr. Roosevelt held his talk with newspapermen in the presence of Senator Swanson.

Joseph Guffey, Democratic leader in Pennsylvania, was another of the day's Roosevelt callers.

Sterling to Be Absent At Ferguson Inaugural

Austin, Tex., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The order of ceremonies for the inauguration of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson as Governor of Texas next Tuesday does not provide for Gov. R. S. Sterling's participation.

"We were given to understand that Gov. Sterling did not want to be in the procession," Senator John Hornsby, of Austin, chairman of the Senate inaugural committee, said. "We did not want to embarrass either the governor or ourselves." Gov. Sterling is a bitter political enemy of James E. Ferguson, former governor and husband of the governor-elect.

9 Freed in Jersey Of Election Frauds

Newark Policeman, Star State Witness, to Be Tried Later.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Nine men who were charged with conspiracy to loot sealed ballot boxes stored under police guard in City Hall basement were acquitted by a jury tonight after seven hours deliberation.

The first word from the jury came at 10:20 p. m. when it returned a verdict acquitting seven of the nine defendants. It reported disagreement regarding Max L. Stegman, Democratic leader in the ward where most of the stolen votes were cast, and Philip B. Tully, assistant custodian of City Hall, and was ordered to consider their cases further by Judge Dallas Flannagan.

Shortly after 11 o'clock, the jury returned to the courtroom and announced it had acquitted the other two men. Patrolman Raymond Herter, also indicted on the conspiracy charge, who became the State's star witness, will be tried at a later date.

Ban to Curb Flu Evil Instituted at Hospital

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Due to numerous cases of influenza at Eastern State Hospital, Williamsburg, a quarantine was declared by Dr. G. W. Brown, superintendent, effective today.

Dr. Brown said there were between 40 and 50 cases of influenza at the hospital and that the quarantine would continue until there is an improvement. "The quarantine is a precautionary measure," he said. "We will not admit visitors this week-end, or until there is an improvement."

Delegation Agrees On Parceling Jobs

South Carolina's Senators to Pick Attorneys and Marshals.

(Associated Press.)

South Carolina's congressional delegation agreed yesterday to apportion patronage after March 4 on the same basis as during the last Democratic administration.

Under this arrangement, explained Senator Smith, in whose office the delegation met, members of the House shall recommend appointments for postoffice positions, rural mail carriers and cotton gin census takers.

Senators, on the other hand, will have selection of such Federal officials as judges, district attorneys, marshals and internal revenue officers.

raise additional taxes, but they concede privately that this probably will have to go over to the new Congress.

Definite plans for the conferences have not been made. Different groups are planning to urge Roosevelt to favor some currency inflation proposal, as well as further legislation to aid the farm mortgage situation.

A feeling is growing among the Democrats that they should await an extra session before undertaking any major proposals so they may have control of both branches of Congress and know that their measures will not run the risk of a possible veto.

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, the Democratic floor leader, said this plan would be acceptable except for the incoming President's desire to stave off an extra assembly until his Cabinet becomes better acquainted with handling the reins of Government.

7 NEW YORK VOTING OFFICIALS INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury Accuses Them of Fraud During National Election.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Seven Manhattan election officials were indicted today by Federal grand juries investigating charges of election frauds.

At the same time, Federal investigators reported an examination of voting machines in seven election districts in the Fourth Assembly District showed that the reported vote for Democratic candidates was boosted as much as 100 apiece by adding to their actual totals votes cast for minor party candidates.

The January grand jury indicted Nathan Silver, Democratic chairman of the board of elections in the Fifth District of the Fourth Assembly District.

When Federal investigators reported they had been unable to find him, a bench warrant for his arrest was issued.

Of the other six men indicted, two were Republican election officers and four Democratic election officials.

All are charged with conspiracy to falsify election returns, a charge carrying a penalty of not more than ten years' imprisonment nor more than $5,000 in fines, or both. Convicted persons are "made ineligible for any place of honor or trust under the United States Government."

Gas Value Hearing Fixed for Feb. 27

Maryland Official Will Sit With District Public Service Board.

The valuation hearing for the Washington & Georgetown Gas Light Companies and their Montgomery County subsidaries was scheduled for February 27 yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission after telephone communication with Harold E. West, chairman of the Maryland Public Service Commission, who will sit in with the District commission.

Meanwhile, the commission will have to decide whether to continue the present temporary reduction of 8½ per cent on consumers' bills pending a settlement of the valuation case and the ordering of a permanent rate cut.

When the present reduction was ordered in late summer, it was stipulated that it should continue only until February 1, but at that time the commission expected to have completed the valuation hearing before that date.

Kegley was said to be suffering from fractures of both ankles and possible skull fracture.

Gangsters Used Medieval Tortures to Kill Scartino

Body, Found in Ohio, Is Identified as Youngstown Racketeer; Forced to Strangulation When Stabbed While Tied Ingeniously With Rope.

Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Detectives delved into the whispering underworld of Youngstown tonight in their hunt for the slayers of Frank Scartino, who died under torture similar to the gruesome punishments of the Middle Ages.

Scartino's body, found some 48 hours ago near Hubbard, Ohio, was identified today. A coroner's verdict said it was a case of strangulation.

But police pieced it together like this:

Scartino was taken out to a lonely ravine by a group of gang enemies. His feet were tied with a stout clothesline. A slipknot was put into the line close to the feet. Scartino was then doubled up, and his head was thrust through the slipknot. Then the helpless victim was jabbed with knives until his own writhings forced him to strangle himself to death.

The detectives started making the rounds of the underworld when a story bobbed up associating Scartino with the late "Peaceful Sam" Lapolina, slain in gang fashion recently.

The police heard Lapolina and Scartino had quarreled just before Lapolina was executed. It seems that Lapolina had "unloaded" a night club—a "dive" that didn't pay—on Scartino. Shortly afterward Lapolina was murdered, but his own kin said Scartino was not involved.

But Scartino told his wife last week that he feared he was marked "for a ride," or so she told the detectives. She said her husband had been keeping a watch from his rooming house for a week before his body was found.

The detectives said more than one gangster tortured Scartino to death, for across the body was thrown a heavy log. No fewer than three men could have thus pinned Scartino's body to the frozen earth.

Mother Hopes to See Burial of Young Son

Unable to come to Washington immediately when she learned early last week that her 12-year-old son, John, had been seriously injured by a hit-and-run driver, Mrs. Mary Curry, of St. Louis, finally made a hurried trip by plane. She arrived seriously ill with pneumonia, only to learn that her son had died just prior to her arrival.

She is now in a serious condition at Gallinger Hospital, but hopeful she will be able to attend her son's funeral. She has asked Acting Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald to hold her son's body at the morgue until she gets well. The boy died Saturday night at Sibley Hospital from injuries suffered when run over by an unidentified driver on January 2. He had been staying with his uncle, Ralph Morgan, 510 Second street northwest.

Water and Milk Reductions Urged

Brightwood Groups Asks Commissioners to Back Cuts.

Resolutions asking the District Commissioners to initiate action necessary for obtaining reductions in water and tax rates, and asking the Federation of Citizens Associations to investigate milk prices in the District with a view to obtaining reductions, were adopted last night by the Brightwood Citizens Association.

In support of the resolution for a reduction in water rates, it was pointed that a $700,000 surplus in the Water Department each year is turned over to the Federal Treasury without the District obtaining any benefit thereby.

Sponsors of the tax reduction resolution contended that such a reduction should be considered in view of the effort to obtain reductions in rentals.

amendment to that bill. It provides that the incoming President shall have authority to make the changes President Hoover was authorized to make by the last session, but to abolish agencies. President Hoover wasn't given authority to abolish anything. Incident to the Byrnes amendment is a provision in the Treasury-Postoffice bill which would permit withholding of appropriations which might have been approved by Congress for agencies which President Roosevelt proposed to abolish.

Perhaps the most important difference between the authorization given to Mr. Hoover and that proposed for Mr. Roosevelt lies in the fact that disapproval of one house of Congress of any of the Hoover proposals killed that proposal. Under the Byrnes proposal it would require disapproval of both houses to kill a retrenchment proposal by Mr. Roosevelt.

No action was taken by the House Democratic caucus yesterday on this proposal, because the rules provide that the member can be bound by a caucus on only one question.

MAPES BILL REVIVAL IS SLATED IN SENATE

session by the House to attempt to justify a recommended reduction in the Federal contribution toward District needs, from $9,500,000 to $6,000,000. Mapes argued that the $4,000,000 derived from his program would more than make up the difference, and in addition tap new sources of revenue.

In conformance with this stand, the House last year voted only a $6,000,000 lump sum, which was raised to $7,775,000 in conference with the Senate. This was done in the face of a report by the Bureau of Efficiency that $10,183,391 was the Government's fair share of local expenses.

Senator Capper said yesterday he would not oppose a favorable report on the "less objectionable" of the Mapes bills. He said there is little opposition to the estate tax measure, which does little more than transfer a credit of $750,000 from the Federal Treasury to the District government. He said the program is lacking in failing to reach local utilities, which he claims are not paying their share of the tax burden, and will ask a favorable report on a bill bringing them into the tax picture.

'SMALL' SUM ASKED BY LIBBY REYNOLDS

Her Father Willing to Settle Without Litigation Over Inheritance.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Possibility of a settlement without litigation of the claims of Libby Reynolds and her infant son to a share in the Smith Reynolds fortune was seen today in a statement by her father that she was willing to accept a "comparatively modest sum."

Alfred Holman, Cincinnati lawyer, father of the widow of Smith Reynolds, found fatally shot in his North Carolina home, said his daughter has offered "to relinquish her child's right to the inheritance, as far as she legally is able, and her own share as widow, save a comparatively modest sum in each case."

The statement, addressed "to the press of the country" expressed the hope that the remainder of Smith Reynolds' patrimony may be devoted to public uses through an endowment to the memory of young Reynolds and his father, R. J. Reynolds.

The statement also said that "it is believed that the others interested will subscribe to such a program."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Reynolds and the underweight baby are said to be doing nicely in the Philadelphia hospital. Today the baby, which was not expected until early in February, was moved in its modified incubator to another room in the hospital so as to avoid any possibility of being disturbed by visitors to the nursery, where other youngsters are being kept.

The mother has not yet seen her son, physicians saying that pleasure will not be hers until she is able to walk to the baby's room. The infant will not be taken to her room because of the danger of the effects of a change of temperature if the little fellow is removed from his so-called "hot bed."

Concord, N. C., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Anne Cannon Smith, divorced wife of the late Smith Reynolds and daughter of J. F. Cannon, rich textile manufacturer, underwent an operation for appendicitis here today and a few hours later was reported "doing nicely."

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Medals from the Roumanian government in recognition of their aviation feats were presented to Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh tonight at a dinner given by Charles A. Davila, the Roumanian Minister.

Saying that flying was one of the "foremost preoccupations" of King Carol, Mr. Davila, in bestowing the medals, told the fliers the king had "decided to symbolize the sentiment of the nation in regard to your unique and unparalleled accomplishments." Mrs. Putnam and Col. Lindbergh said "Thank you."

SAM BEARD CACHED FORTUNE IN TRUNK

Tax Case Defense Contends Large Sum Not Made in Recent Years.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 13.—Just when Samuel R. Beard, Washingtonian on trial before a jury in the United States District Court, kept sums ranging from $275,000 to $450,000 in cash in a hide trunk was one of the issues brought into the trial of the case today.

Beard is being tried on a charge of making false income tax returns during 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1930.

William Curran and Morton P. Fisher, attorneys for Beard, contend that several large amounts of bonds bought by their client were purchased from moneys the defendant had kept for a long time in an old trunk and later in a safe deposit box.

The Government, represented by Charles G. Page and Cornelius Mundy, both assistant United States district attorneys, contends that these bonds were bought out of income derived during those years and not from a large cash reserve, which the defendant claims dates back as far as 1909.

Most of the testimony today centered about income-tax returns made by Beard and about conversations the defendant had with various internal revenue agents.

Lieut. Oscar J. Letterman, of the Washington Police Department, testified that he had made a raid of an alleged bookmaking establishment operated by Beard, but said that the case was not presented in court.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

THERE'S music in everything, breakfast, grapefruit and all the day's routine. There's music in a book, in a picture, and music everywhere. Accept these statements from a man who knows music, who can play any instrument in the orchestra, who is an expert on the flute, but who has never studied music.

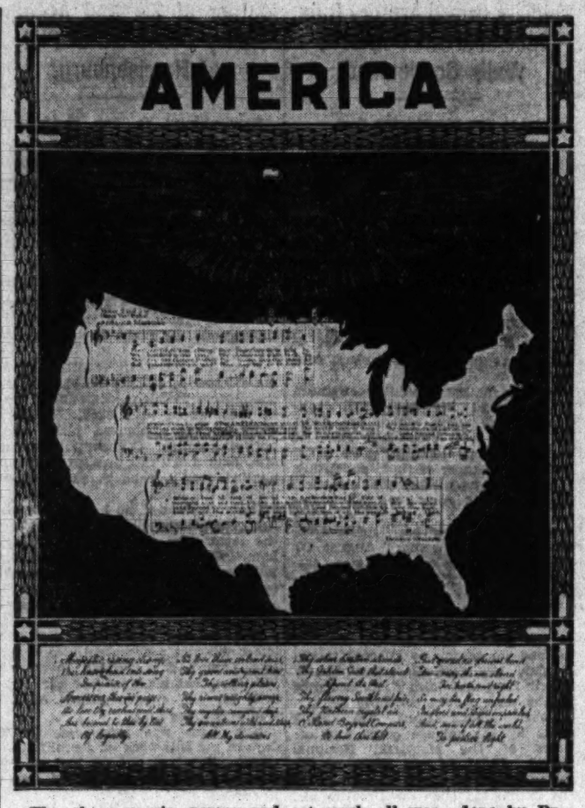
DR. HENCKLES.

Dr. Theodore Henckels, chief, translation unit, Commerce, who knows 24 languages, was born musical. He has been musical all his 72 years. Musically, he is "one hundred years ahead of time," to use the expression of Arthur Gibson, private organist to Charles M. Schwab, of Bethlehem Steel renown.

Dr. Henckels' steady hand, directing translations by day, wrote the prize-winning song, "America," in the New York Herald's national patriotic song contest, July 4, 1917. Judges were John Philip Sousa, Victor Herbert, Reginald de Koven and Herbert Witherspoon.

And yet, not among the least of Dr. Henckels' talents are poetry and art. Perhaps this is the proper time to include Dr. Henckels' philosophy, which explains his versatility:

"With mental faculties logically developed, not necessarily in a special line, there is nothing you think worth while undertaking to do that you can't do, provided you will concentrate on the problem, work, work, work, and never give up till the last gasp. With such persistence and love for the idea involved you can move mountains."



The above music, verses and art work all were done by Dr. Theodore Henckels, chief, translation unit, Commerce.

AS exhibit A of his artistic nature the accompany spread-eagle panel of his song, "America," is presented. Dr. Henckels belongs to that old school of penmen. Indeed, one will not find a typewriter at Dr. Henckel's desk. Machines are in his office, true, but they are used by his translating staff. Dr. Henckels' hand still retains its deftness, its artistic stroke that makes all letters symmetrical and rest on imaginary lines.

"Dr. Henckels, I understand, you are composer of 'The Spirit of America,' a national ode?"

His response was reserved. He did not seek publicity in the matter, but he consented to let us see and read his ode, on which he has been at work so long.

"Doctor, I understand you have been at work on 'The Spirit of America' more than 30 years." I had, in fact, heard that the doctor had started at least 35 years ago on it.

"I began work on it in 1896," he told me.

THE music in front of me was old as I; started before the Spanish-American War. Started in pencil, it had been inked in. And the job looked for all the world as though it had been produced by machine. But handwork it all was, even to the very last sharp, rest and clef. That is the ode Arthur Gibson told Dr. Henckels was "one hundred years ahead of time."

"It is not jazz. It has the spirit of Bach and Wagner." And the good doctor's eyes sparkled as though he were about to reach for his baton and direct an orchestra in the pit.

"History is the motion picture screen of the human race; a scenario more variegated, more interesting and more instructive than any the mind can conceive and the hand produce. Man comes, goes and acts constantly over all the far circle of the earth's surface."

These are words from a spoken part in the prologue.

The Pilgrims' Chorus, The Flag, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, Our Country, The Ship of State, The Wedding of the Oceans (completion of the Panama Canal), Serenade (Columbia), April (1917), Sixth (war was declared), Loyalty to the Flag, The School-Liberty's Safeguard, America, Postlude, Herald of Peace, Peace, The People and the Great Vision (family of nations). These are the subdivisions into which the ode, "The Spirit of America," fall.

WHO can say, if Dr. Henckels is "one hundred years ahead of his time," but that in years to succeed 1933 the doctor's work will find its place on the shelves with the immortals? Time still settles a lot of questions.

"Doctor, I judge you are a philatelist, added to your other interests."

"Oh, those stamps. I save them for my grandchild." They had come on letters from the four points of the compass, on letters seeking information on this problem or that of international commerce, in one of those 24 tongues of which Dr. Henckels is master.

And the next time things seem too humdrum, repeat this:

"There's music in everything."

Sunday's Washington Post will bring complete news on that $10,500 to be awarded 51 women and, of course, Government employes will be eligible.

YOU don't always have to go away from home to get the news. Read the yarn Granville M. Hunt tells about the time Ike Gregg, Postoffice Department, was representing the New York World in Washington.

It was one of those days. Snow was knee-high. Traffic was tied up. Taxis, there weren't any moving and street cars were at a standstill.

The World had just sent a message to call at the Argentine Legation for information on Argentina's naval strength.

Ike did his best. Still, how to get there? The taxi called did not arrive. He still lacked the information. The World was waiting.

An idea! The World Almanac! And looking under the "Ns" there it was. Argentina's naval strength! What a break!

And here's the message Ike sent to his paper:

"On Page 382, World Almanac, Argentina's naval strength is ..... The World Almanac is a handy book to have around. Suggest you buy one."

The New York World at that time published the World Almanac.

Well, what of it?

By this time Swarmi was beyond surprise. So, when Gus slammed the brakes and pulled up the lever, Swarmi poked forth his head for the fifth time in the last three blocks and would you believe it, there was the street number in brightly polished brass, the same number as on the envelope. Surely this must be the place.

Everything would come to Fedd, now that he had waited, and so painfully, too. Waiting had become his watchword.

Fedd was traveling light, we recall, for he had lost his junk some chapters back.

"THE people have been misinformed as to the economies that could be effected by cutting Federal pay rolls," says Thomas F. Flaherty, secretary-treasurer, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks.

"The distribution of the tax dollar shows that 55 per cent goes for local taxes, 30 per cent for Federal taxes, 15 per cent for State taxes. Only 4 per cent of every dollar paid in taxes goes for the wages of Government employes. Consequently, the entire civil personnel could be dismissed without effecting any substantial economy in taxes."

The economy law, he says, has failed of its purpose, not having effected substantial economies, and at the same time materially injuring the service morale. It has impaired mass purchasing power of the postal workers to the extent of $40,000,000 throughout the country, which, in turn, has been disastrous to the small business man, he stated.

"Economists state that a live dollar, such as goes into the pay envelope of a postal worker, turns over five times monthly in rapid circulation. Thus, the $40,000,000 that will be cut this fiscal year (1932-33) from the postal pay rolls represents a decreased spending volume of more than $2,000,000,000. Prosperity never can be restored by spending less, for he had lost his junk some chapters back.

Diary Hobby List

What's Your Hobby?

TO MAKE BEACH SANDALS.

(This is the second of a series of articles prepared by the National Committee on Wood Utilization in its effort to bring about the utilization of second-hand wooden containers such as boxes, crates and barrels now thrown away or burned.

SANDPAPERING and planing will remove markings stenciled on containers as well as scratches and other marks. It may be desirable, simply to remove marred boards and nail them back in place with marred surfaces inside.

The best method of dismantling a wooden barrel is to knock off hoops with a hammer, or, if there are any nails or fasteners, to extract them. The whole barrel will then collapse. If it is desired to take out only one head, simply remove the top head and if necessary, replace the hoops, which will hold the staves together.

In order to remove the top from plywood boxes without damaging them, all nails holding the top to the sides and ends should be pulled. After the top is removed it is simple to knock the sides and bottoms loose from the ends.

Dismantling wirebound boxes is not hard if the lid is folded back and the end panels removed by sawing just inside the two upright pieces of the framework to which the sides of the box are stapled. The cut should extend down to, not into, the horizontal pieces to which the bottom of the box is stapled. The end panels should then be pushed in, so they will be split away at the bottom.

Unfold the box by bending the sides and lid down flush with the bottom. The result is a "mat," consisting of four sections joined to each other by wires. Turn the mat over, so that the wire and staples are uppermost. Cut the sections apart by clipping each binding wire where the sections are jointed.

With nippers or pliers pull staples in each section except those which hold the two outermost wires, then saw off the two other edges of each section, about an inch inside the wires left attached to the wood.

"You Can Make It For Camp and Cottage," the booklet of the national committee on wood utilization, shows how to dismantle wirebound boxes.

If a nail puller is not available, the sides and bottoms of the boxes may be easily removed from the ends by hammering on a block of wood placed across the pieces to be removed as near the nailed sections as the inside of the boxes will permit. This will avoid splitting of the pieces.

Beach sandals—A pair of sandals may be made from two boards, 7-16 by 4 by 12 inches.

Sketch the outline of your foot on the boards. Cut out the sandals. Straps, nailed to the sandals in such a manner as to pass over the instep and toes, serve to keep the sandals on the feet.

Three booklets, illustrated, "You Can Make It For Camp and Cottage," "You Can Make It" and "You Can Make It for Profit" (for unemployed), can be had at 5 cents for any one, post paid, by addressing Hobby Editor, Washington Post.

Britain Lifts Ban On Capital Issues

Change Will Permit Industry to Profit by Cheap Money Conditions.

London, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The treasury tonight announced the removal of restrictions on new capital issues with certain exceptions.

The exceptions included: (1) Foreign issues or issues the proceeds of which are remitted directly or indirectly to countries outside the empire; and (2) optional replacement of existing issues by new issues if they rank as trustee securities and involve either underwriting or an invitation to the public to subscribe new cash.

The change means that British industry and trade now will be allowed to enjoy fully the benefits accruing to cheap money conditions. The ban was imposed to enable the government to carry out its 5 per cent war loan conversions, which now are practically completed.

8-Pound Princess Is Born To Bulgaria's Royal Couple

Queen Joanna of Bulgaria, who yesterday gave birth to a princess, and King Boris III. The baby weighs 8 pounds. The queen is a daughter of the King and Queen of Italy.

King Boris III Responds to Cheering Throngs at His Palace.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A princess was born in Sofia this morning and all Bulgaria is rejoicing.

The signal that the first-born of King Boris III and Queen Joanna had been ushered into the world was boomed out by cannon at 10:40 a. m. Within half an hour a huge throng of cheering citizens was storming the palace gates, upsetting the guards, crowding into the royal park and demanding the appearance of the king.

The king gave an order to the guards to throw the grounds open to the public. He then appeared on a balcony, smilingly responding to a long and enthusiastic demonstration by the crowd.

The whole city took on a festive appearance. Singing and shouting crowds surged through the streets. The air was filled with patriotic songs and cheers for the king and queen. Those who owned flags unfurled them. Telephone and telegraph wires hummed carrying the news throughout the land. The exact hour of the birth was fixed officially at 9:45 a. m.

The king's response from the balcony was brief but emotional.

"With all my heart and in the name of my wife I thank you infinitely," he said. "Long live the Bulgarian people! Long live Bulgaria! Her star will shine through the centuries!"

The infant weighs 8 pounds. King Boris insisted on remaining at his wife's side. Wearing surgeon's white he stayed till the wailing princess arrived and was weighed.

Arrangements were made for Premier Nicholas Muschanoff to announce the birth of the child officially in Parliament. A royal manifesto will be made public. Tomorrow a solemn high mass will be celebrated.

The names of the princess have not yet been decided, but they will include Marie and Helene in memory of the paternal and maternal grandmothers. The queen is a daughter of the King and Queen of Italy.

SENATE NOW HOLDS FATE OF FILIPINO FREEDOM BILL

the road to liberty and safety, which we desire, but on the path leading to new and enlarged dangers to liberty and freedom itself."

Concluding debate against the veto, Hare, who piloted the bill through the House last session with a 306-to-47 vote, told his colleagues:

"There is nothing in the message whatsoever that has not received the most careful consideration by your committee."

Filipino Spokesman's Plea.

Referring to the President's suggestion that "international conditions in the Orient may be unpropitious for the legislation," the South Carolina Democrat declared:

"I think taking the action that we contemplate at this time will strengthen the United States in the attitude and position it has taken toward its possession in the Orient for the past 34 years.

"To my mind, equivocation at this time because there may be some little disturbance in the Orient would be an evidence of weakness instead of an evidence of strength."

Pleading for the liberty of his own people, Commissioner Osias urged the House to "confirm its previous stand" and give his people their freedom.

Energetically walking up and down the well of the Chamber, Osias said he was "disappointed at the President's veto," and added "not one word of censure or resentment over Mr. Hoover's action" would escape his lips.

Hoover Criticism Stifled.

"He acted within his constitutional rights," the Filipino said. "I respect his office, but I beg of you, act within your constitutional rights and vote to give us that freedom we have pleaded for so long."

Failure to do so, he added, would "arouse the islands and make relations difficult.

"My people are willing to accept this bill with its limitations in exchange for the precious boon of liberty," he added.

Efforts to restrict Filipino immigration and limit imports, he asserted, "will arouse the keenest resentment in the breasts of our people" unless "you give us what we ask and have asked so long."

"All we ask is fairness and justice," Osias said. "Let this great Christian Nation of the West be the mother of the first Christian republic of the East."

Commissioner Guevera expressed his gratitude in behalf of the Filipino people to the House after it had acted. Both were applauded lustily.

President's Reasons.

In his veto message, President Hoover said:

"In my view we must undertake further steps toward the liberation of the Philippine Islands, but they should be based upon a plebiscite to be taken 15 or 20 years hence. On such an occasion there would be a full impress upon the Filipinos of the consequences of their act instead of its confusion as a side issue to the substitution of another intermediate form of self-government offering no vital improvement in their liberties to that they now possess.

"They would then have freedom to form their own constitution and government, both in the light of experience and the forces moving at that time. * * * Immigration should be restricted at once. We should cooperate with them to bring about their economic independence before the plebiscite by very gradual reduction of their free imports. * * *

Favored Trade Issue.

"The United States should plainly announce prior to the time of this plebiscite whether (a) it will make absolute and complete withdrawal from all military and naval bases, and from every moral or other commitment to maintain their independence, or (b) the conditions as to authority and rights within the islands under which we will continue that protection.

"These final steps can not be properly determined now by either the Philippine people or ourselves."

President Hoover contended that the Philippines are "absolutely dependent upon their favored trade with the United States" and that with too quickly diminished exports many of the islands' industries would be unable to compete with neighboring countries, resulting in a flight of capital, reduced tax revenues and an unbalanced budget.

'13 Club' Has Bad Luck At Friday the 13th Feast

Chicago Antisuperstition Society Wins Absolutely No Success in Effort to Bring Down Misfortune on Its Collective Head.

Chicago, Friday, the thirteenth of January (A.P.).—The 13 members of Chicago's Antisuperstition Society wound up 13 days of breaking mirrors and walking under ladders today with a 13-course luncheon, starting at 13 o'clock, European time.

The society's president, Sidney N. Strotz (count the letters in his name), delivered as the main address this 13-word discourse in exactly 13 seconds:

"The purpose of this organization is to prove superstition to be the bunk."

Every member then spilled salt and Walter 13 set on a diss in the center of the table a black lemon studded with 25 black-headed pins, avowed to be unluckier than 1,000 black cats on a dark night.

At the end of the jinx-defying luncheon, each member wished every other one the worst of luck, and 13 cigarettes were lighted from four matches, the thirteenth member of the club being a nonsmoker.

The members started the club as a joke, but Secreary Herman T. Powers disclosed in a more serious note at the luncheon that the thirteen days of trying to cause bad luck have taught them a moral.

"We have learned," he said, "that fear is the thing that keeps prosperity away. What America needs is a positive attitude, not a fearful one. It was fear that caused 99 per cent of our bank runs. We've started a permanent organization, being copied in many other cities, and I believe we'll do the country lots of good."

Then each of the thirteen members picked up one of thirteen candles, paraded under a ladder touched the flames to an oil soaked statue of Buddha, and walked unflinchingly across the trail of a black cat that had been shooed across the floor of the cafe.

JAPANESE RESENT HOOVER'S REMARKS

Veto Message Views Taken to Mean He Feared Tokyo Aggression.

Tokyo, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—High resentment among the ranks of Japanese officials was the reaction today to President Hoover's purported intimations that Japanese aggression might follow if the United States granted independence to the Philippine Islands.

The President did not mention Japan specifically, the Japanese admitted, but they regarded his statement in his veto message on the Philippines independence bill that the Filipinos would be helpless to prevent infiltration of neighbors as a direct intimation he feared Japanese invasion of the islands.

This section of the President's veto message was closely scrutinized at the gaimusho (foreign office), and in the war and navy departments.

Officials admitted there was nothing they could object to specifically, but none would agree that Mr. Hoover was referring to any other country than Japan, although the Chinese also have migrated to the Philippines in increasing numbers in recent years. Most of the small shops and other small businesses are run by Chinese.

Although they objected to this phase of the Hoover veto, the Japanese were frank to admit they regarded Philippine independence as a possible danger to tranquillity in the Orient.

In this connection, a government spokesman made this significant remark: "Japan, in the event of Chinese-Filipino trouble, of course, could not remain neutral because of its mission as a preserver of the peace in the Orient."

Liberal officials favored preservation of the present situation in the islands, and demanded that the government there outline a definite polity in regard to continental Asia.

Filipino Assails President's Veto

Amis Declares Action of Hoover in Disapproving Liberty Unjustified.

Mr. Fernando T. Amis, president of the Filipino Educational and Relief Society of America, hopes that the Senate will overrule the veto of President Hoover on the Philippine independence bill. This young leader feels that in case the Senate does not override Mr. Hoover's veto, a political turmoil might occur in the islands.

Mr. Amis declared: "Our leaders representing all political parties in the islands who are in the city have done their very best in regard to the measure. They have worked in harmony with Congress, the real representative power of the people of America. I believe Mr. Hoover's message to the Senate, in regard to his action against the bill, was absolutely unjustified."

The bill, according to Mr. Amis, was accepted by the islanders. A special envoy was sent here by Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, to present views of the Philippine Legislature. Senator Benigno S. Aquino, the official envoy, also favors the bill, and reinforced the Philippine parliamentary mission to push same and win Mr. Hoover's approval. A resolution will be presented by Mr. Amis to some senators who oppose the measure begging them to favor the returned bill.

PLANE CRASH KILLS D. C. ARMY OFFICER

also "bail out," Hunter could not say.

The scene of the accident is about 15 miles northeast of here in Greene County.

Elmendorf and Hunter had been at Wright Field a week, trying out the plane which Air Corps officials had about decided to place into production. The craft was a P-25 consolidated, a biplane combination of the pursuit and combat types. A board of Air Corps officers at a meeting Sunday said the plane was equal to that of any nation.

Brig. Gen. H. C. Pratt commandant of the materiel division at Wright Field, said a board of inquiry would be called tomorrow to investigate the accident.

Both of the officers involved in yesterday's accident near Dayton, Ohio, were well known here. Capt. Elmendorf at the time of his death was assigned to the Office of the Chief of the Air Corps in charge of pursuit aviation in the Training and Operations Division. Capt. Hunter, renowned war-time ace, had also served in the same capacity here, being relieved about three years ago by Capt. Elmendorf.

Considered as two of the most outstanding pursuit fliers in the Army Air Corps, the pair had been ordered to Dayton to conduct tests on a new YP-25 pursuit-type of plane.

Capt. Elmendorf is survived by his widow, of 4816 Middlesex lane, Edgemoor, Md. He was 37 years old and was a graduate of Cornell University, the Air Service Pilots School and the Air Service Pursuit School.

Capt. Frank Hunter was one of the most colorful of America's aces in the World War. He holds the Distinguished Service Cross with four oak leaf clusters for an engagement near Verneville, France, September 17, 1918, when he shot down two enemy planes and drove off six others, crashed himself but escaped. He has been involved in numerous other crashes.

In 1924 he suffered a broken neck when his plane fell near Buffalo, N. Y.

He was born in Savannah, Ga., is 38 years old, attended the exclusive Hotchkiss School and later enlisted in the Army, rising through the ranks until he was commissioned. He is a graduate of the Air Service Observers School and the Air Service Tactical School and was rated an air pilot and observer. He is not married and is now stationed at March Field, Riverdale, Calif. He is familiarly known in the Air Corps as "Bust 'Em Up" Hunter.

THOMAS CARRIES ON IN BANK BILL FIGHT

the newcomer, Huey Long, of Louisiana, it was apparent that the longer the fight lasted the wider the breach would be between the conservative and liberal wings of the Democrats.

Republicans generally have stayed out of the Democratic controversy and for the most part remained out of the chamber yesterday except when other business was up.

Thomas, tall, silver-haired Oklahoman, clashed with Glass at the outset of his speech when he charged the Federal Reserve Board had taken $80,000,000 out of circulation in the past week and "canceled the money."

Glass, author of the Federal Reserve act, challenged the statement, saying the board had no authority to "take a dollar out of circulation."

He said Thomas must have meant that the "member banks of the Reserve System paid $80,000,000 of their indebtedness to the Reserve Banks because patrons of the member banks had paid their notes and the member banks no longer required the loans."

The Oklahoman again brought Glass to his feet when he maintained the board, when in the "friendly" hands of the Wilson administration, placed sufficient money in circulation to bring high praise from the Virginia senator.

"The board had no authority to issue a dollar of currency, and if it did I would apply for some of it myself," Glass replied.

Thomas said that what the Nation needs "is not a new banking act, but a new Federal Reserve Board."

U. S. EMBASSY GETS NEWS BAN PROTEST

American Editor at Havana Leads Campaign to Oust Machado Censor.

Havana, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Formal protest was lodged at the United States Embassy today against Cuba's new censorship regulations.

The protest was made by John T. Wilford, an American citizen and editor and proprietor of the English language Havana American News. In the absence of Ambassador Harry F. Guggenheim the protest was received by First Secretary Edwin Reed. A copy of it was turned over to the military censors, who are administering the regulations under the general staff of the army.

Spanish language newspapers have been censored here continuously since the 1931 revolt. On Monday the regulations were extended to take in the three English language papers—the American News, the Havana Post and the Havana Telegram. Yesterday police notified all distributors of publications that every American magazine and newspaper must be approved by the censors before being sold.

Police confiscated 100 copies of the New York Herald Tribune, 63 of the New York Times and 32 of the New York Sun. These were the editions of January 10 and they carried dispatches concerning Cuban censorship.

Mr. Wilford, who was deported from Cuba in 1931 for criticizing the government of President Machado and was permitted to return eleven months later, asserted that the censorship of his newspaper was "unwarranted and illegal."

"The Supreme Court of Cuba," he said, "has handed down decisions declaring that censorship is unconstitutional, even under the emergency status of suspension of constitutional guarantees."

Havana, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Domingo Ramos, a surgeon, and Gustavo Cuervo Rubio, a lawyer, have taken refuge at the Urguayan Legation. They are identified with antigovernment factions. Four other oppositionists have found asylum in the Mexican Embassy.

Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "If iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away, and let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles. For then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear: And thine age shall be clearer than the noonday; thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning." (Job 11:14,15,17).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The infinite never began nor will it ever end. Mind and its formations can never be annihilated." (Page 245).

THE PHILIPPINE BILL.

In the face of a warning by the President that the Philippine bill paves the way to chaos and may lead to war, the House passes the bill over his veto. The Senate passed the bill without a record vote, and its action upon the veto message is now awaited.

In withholding approval of the bill the President voices the American spirit. Eventual independence of the Philippines is the wish of the American people. There is no desire to prolong the regime which imposes burdens and dangers upon the United States. But the time and circumstances of separation are questions which the United States must consider carefully if independence is not to be followed by a condition infinitely worse than the postponement of independence.

Everybody knows that the Philippine bill is designed to benefit American producers by shutting out competition from the islands. It is a Philippine independence bill merely for the sake of depriving Filipinos of the American market. Eighty per cent of their exports are sent to the United States. They are dependent upon the American market for their economic life. The bill provides for curtailment of their access to this market, to be followed by complete abolition of all tariff exemptions when independence comes. This would be about eleven years hence. During this interim the Philippines would be forced to reorganize its industry and find other markets. The arrangement would sound the death-knell of self-sustaining economic life in the islands.

The intermediate period before the Filipinos would be turned adrift would be marked by an abandonment of American authority over the islands, while imposing responsibilities upon this country. The divorce of responsibility and authority is always deadly to good government. President-elect Roosevelt referred to this fact frequently during his campaign, and it was upon that ground that he declined to co-operate with President Hoover in planning for the world economic conference. He would not accept responsibility while he lacked authority—and it was a wise decision.

The Philippines are not populated by a homogeneous people. The element which would claim control under the independence bill is opposed by another race. Civil war would be the first result of independence. This situation would invite foreign intervention, especially as the islands are fertile and not densely populated. If Manchuria is tempting to Japan, what would the Philippines be, with a more suitable climate and with Japanese interests already paying the way? The creation of a bogus state by Japanese forces, as was done in Manchuria, would make it necessary for the United States to fight Japan or betray the Filipinos.

It is proposed in the bill that the United States shall promise to secure international neutralization of the islands after independence is established. Yet it is also proposed that the United States shall retain military and naval bases. These provisions are contradictory. The nations would not agree to neutralize the islands and yet permit the United States to hold the advantage of military and naval bases which are denied to other powers. But neutrality would be worthless unless the United States were prepared to enforce it against violators; so the eventual outcome of independence without self-sustaining economic equilibrium is a chaos that invites aggression and war.

The Philippine bill is economically dishonest and politically immoral. It does not accomplish what it pretends to accomplish. It inflicts wrong upon the Filipinos from the first, and betrays them in the end. It opens the door to war in the Far East, in circumstances which would work for the defeat of American arms.

If statesmanship prevails in the Senate the veto of the Philippine bill will be sustained.

"FARM PARITY."

Passage of the so-called farm relief bill by the House was taken for granted. Ever since it began consideration of the measure the House has been dominated by the thought that something must be done for the farmer. No sound remedy for the farmer's ills is known. So the House has decided to launch a bizarre experiment in the hope that it might be of some benefit to agriculture in spite of its shortcomings.

The defects of the measure are too grave and too extensive for full analysis. Its provisions are limited to wheat, cotton, tobacco, hogs, rice, butter fat and peanuts. Apparently there is no sound reason for the exclusion of other agricultural products. The rice, dairy and peanut interests happened to be represented with sufficient strength in the House to force their products into the bill. Other agricultural interests lacked support in the House, but they may be able to swamp the measure with amendments in the Senate.

As it stands, the so-called farm parity bill would tax all consumers, including farmers, for the benefit of a limited group of farmers. Its discrimination against some farmers for the benefit of others can not be denied. If bounties are to be paid on such limited crops as rice and peanuts, surely corn growers, sugar producers, live stock men and poultry raisers have a just claim to similar treatment. Sponsors of the measure hope that it will increase the price of the basic commodities and that other prices will also turn upward. But there is no assurance that the benefits of higher prices would be so distributed.

The House has evolved this experiment in the apparent belief that it embodies President-elect Roosevelt's farm relief plan. No specific formula has been outlined by Mr. Roosevelt, but the general suggestions in his campaign addresses differ widely from the so-called parity plan. He suggested that any farm relief plan should finance itself. This scheme would be financed directly out of the Treasury. It is true that taxes equal to the spread between the guaranteed price and actual market prices would be levied on the processing of all commodities in the bill, but there is no assurance that these levies would actually raise enough money to pay the bounties. President-elect Roosevelt's plan would not countenance dumping of surpluses on foreign markets, but the exportation of commodities at lower prices than they bring in the home market, as contemplated by this bill, is dumping within the meaning of the law. When all points of difference between this bill and President-elect Roosevelt's views are calculated, it seems doubtful that the measure would be acceptable to him.

Probably the most objectionable feature of the measure is its extension of bureaucracy. There are about 6,300,000 farms in the United States, most of which produce one or more of the commodities in the bill. Each farm must be supervised by the Secretary of Agriculture if this measure is administered as contemplated by the House. Agents would have to ascertain how much of each crop farmers have planted in the past; how much they reduce their acreage to conform to the parity plan; what crops may be planted in such acreage, and so forth. It would set up the most gigantic bureaucracy the country has ever known.

The Senate is very skeptical of the domestic allotment plan. Yet the Senate, too, is dominated by the thought that something must be done for the farmer, and it has no plan of its own. It may accept the House bill as a political gesture. But neither House can pass the measure over a Presidential veto.

RED TAPE VS. ECONOMY.

In casting about for ways and means of saving the Government money the Senate committee on economy wandered off into a wilderness of red tape. Among other curious recommendations, it advised Congress to transfer personnel records from the Civil Service Commission to the various executive departments. If the committee had searched for a year it could not have found a more ridiculous suggestion for saving money.

The Civil Service Commission is a clearing house for all data on the personnel of the Government service. The records of nearly all Federal employes are kept by the commission in standardized form. From its centralized files all personnel information required by any one may be supplied without delay or difficulty. The economy committee proposes that these centralized files should be distributed among 50 departments and independent establishments in Washington and about 100 such units in other parts of the country. Its scheme amounts to a retreat from order to chaos.

Personnel records are the most important tool which the Civil Service Commission uses to carry on its work. If the commission had to rely upon 150 establishments for the basic information on which to make decisions with regard to the eligibility of employes for transfer, promotion, reinstatement and retirement, it would be hopelessly handicapped. It is doubtful whether the commission could accomplish the duties imposed upon it by law if it were deprived of the records which it has accumulated.

Standardization of personnel records would be impossible if those records were scattered among numerous departments. Each department would become a law unto itself in personnel matters, and the merit system would be seriously impaired. Individuals without any classified status could be put on the pay rolls of any department or office under the proposed law, because the Civil Service Commission would not be required to pass upon the records of such employes. The efforts of the commission to maintain the Government service on the basis of merit, rather than spoils, would be struck a severe blow.

Apportionment of Government jobs among the States would have to be abandoned under the provisions of the economy bill because the commission would have no records on which to make such an apportionment. Promotions, transfers and reinstatements would become extremely complicated, because the records of some employes might be scattered through a number of departments. In some cases it would be necessary to search the records of 150 different agencies to determine whether a single employe is entitled to promotion. The time and energy wasted in such eighteenth-century methods would undoubtedly add to the expense of administering personnel matters. If real economy is desired, Congress should concentrate all personnel records and problems in the Civil Service Commission.

FOREIGN TROOPS IN CHINA.

It is not generally realized that in the Tienstin-Peiping area of China, which may become involved in the present forward movement of Japanese, there are foreign military contingents numbering about 5,000. Ever since the Boxer troubles in the closing year of the last century the United States has maintained troops there, as have Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan. Each nation has about 800 men on duty in the cities along the Hai-Ho River, where numerous foreign industries and interests are located.

For more than twenty years the Fifteenth Infantry regiment has represented the United States in this area. General command of this force, whenever concerted action is necessary, is exercised by the highest ranking officer of the armies represented. So far it has never failed that, while the American and European contingents may be under the command of a major, colonel or brigadier general, Japan has had a lieutenant-general with her troops in China. This has been explained by the statement that Japan, "from her very geographical position desires the fullest possible control and influence."

Foreign troops in Peiping are not obligated in any way to take part in a defense of the city in case it should be attacked, further than looking to the protection of their own nationals and their interests. Foreign contingents cannot take aggressive action without authorization from their governments. Only when an emergency calls for a "defensive plan" does cooperative action occur and the Japanese senior on the ground takes command. This situation explains why all Chinese leaders are careful not to precipitate an emergency along the Hai-Ho.

When President Hoover ordered the elimination of useless jobs and the consolidation of bureaus he overlooked the fact that an army travels on its belly.

The most encouraging sign in the congressional situation is the evidence that a filibuster's tongue does run down after a hard day's wagging.

Why should Congress worry over Japan gobbling the Philippines, if American farmers can gobble the trade that keeps the Filipinos alive?

"Liberals" are liberal in advising President-elect Roosevelt how to select a Cabinet that will suit them.

President Hoover vetoed the Philippine independence bill, but the House repassed the coconut oil tariff.

JAPAN WILL PAY

From the Cleveland Press.

Japan is at it again. Last year, when she extended her military conquest of Manchuria and made her bloody gesture at Shanghai, it was frequently reported that her aim also was to grab the North China area south of the Great Wall. Now, with her capture of Shanhaikwan, the key wall city which commands the Gulf of Liaotung, Japan is in position to spring at Tientsin and Peiping, the northern capital, or take Jehol Province behind Manchuria.

The occupation of Shanhaikwan was almost an exact replica of the seizure of the Manchurian capital of Chinchow just a year ago, or rather, the Japanese excuses were the same.

What the treaty nations will do in face of this latest treaty violation by Japan is not clear—probably nothing. The United States already has put itself on record, through the Hoover-Stimson doctrine, withholding recognition of agreements and territory obtained by force and in violation of the treaties.

But Great Britain and France, in playing Japan's game, have sidetracked efforts of the smaller nations to have the League of Nations act on the Lytton report and in behalf of the treaties. The United States can go no farther alone. Effective peace action—even of a diplomatic character—must be international; and international action is blocked by the European powers which have deserted the treaties in order to go over to the side of militaristic Japan.

Though Japan is apparently safe from international pressure, nevertheless she probably will pay and pay heavily in the end. She is awakening and unifying China against her, and thus not only destroying her largest market but militarizing a lasting enemy stronger than herself. At the same time, Japan is forcing Russia in self-protection to complete another military railroad to the danger area, to concentrate large numbers of troops and otherwise prepare for a probable future war in which 600,000,000 Russians and Chinese will defeat 80,000,000 Japanese.

Meanwhile, at home Japan drifts closer to governmental bankruptcy, unbearable taxes to maintain the militarists, and extreme exploitation and suffering which usually end in revolutionary explosion.

Maybe not today or tomorrow, but some day Japan will pay.

Too Full to Work.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

WINTER IN THE GARDEN.

All that can be witnessed from my window as I toil
Is a white but rumpled blanket on the rose bed's nurturing soil
And a pine tree and a cedar which in green are gleaming still,
And some hardy, hungry sparrows on my narrow window sill.

Like a bed the boy has slept in now the ground appears to be,
With the blankets piled and twisted, scarcely fit for folks to see;
With the things he has discarded, helter-skelter strewn about—
Thus the garden strikes my fancy every time that I look out.

There's a curious sort of calmness over shrub and plant and vine,
And the sleeping trees stand solemn as the winds about them whine.
Now the songbirds have departed and the loneliness and gloom
Give the earth a curious likeness to a boy's deserted room.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE:

So you have been to the dentist's again. And doubtless you said, despite the hurting: "Just a wee cavity, quickly filled. Nothing important."

If that was your reaction, let me give you a tip. That unimportant business may some day make a bad impression and cost you the job you want, the social position you want or the man you want.

It may sound cynical, but a girl's success and happiness often depend on good teeth more than brains.

You know what "bad" teeth can do. They wrecked your old dad's health and brought him years of misery. Isn't one horrible example in the family enough?

I know your answer. You use the right paste and brush your teeth religiously. But that isn't enough. Bathing regularly won't prevent sciatica.

There is a way to keep your teeth sound, and here is the story of it.

Two missionaries of science, working in China, were impressed by the uniformly faultless teeth in the filthy mouths of their Chinese and Tibetan patients.

They attributed the paradox to phosphorus and sunlight and came back to their old school in Toronto to prove their theory by experimenting on rats. And before they had finished they were able to give rats sound teeth or decayed teeth at will.

Here is the secret of it. The mysterious something called Vitamin D is a kind of digestant. It enables your body to use the calcium and phosphorus in your food.

Nature provides Vitamin D in sunlight and you are supposed to absorb it through your skin, but it is also stored in milk, fresh vegetables and fish oils and you can get it that way.

Nature doesn't overlook anything. Your mouth juices flow best when you are chewing, and these juices are the best of all agencies to prevent tooth decay. More chewing, more saliva; more saliva, better teeth.

That's the whole story. Deny yourself Vitamin D and you will gum it at forty. Expose yourself to sunlight, chew your food thoroughly and get your share of milk, fresh vegetables and fish oil, and you can forever escape the filling and yanking of teeth.

I'm quite serious, my dear. It is stupid to travel a rough and dangerous road when somebody has paved one for you. Love, DAD.

POLITICAL COMMENT

The Roosevelt Program.

Topeka Capital.

President-elect Roosevelt has assumed the leadership of his party and put Speaker Garner in his place, the conference of Democratic congressional leaders with Mr. Roosevelt in New York having definitely scrapped the manufacturers' sales tax and come to an agreed program of increased economies, continuance of the 1-cent gasoline tax for another year and to increased income tax rates on the lower brackets, along with a reduction of the exemptions to include now exempt incomes.

The conference gives it out that the new program will balance the 1934 budget, but included in it is the tax on beer. If any further conferences on beer are to be held not much will be left of that revenue project. It started out to produce 600 millions, after a few conferences shrunk to 300 millions and then to about 250 millions. The conference now includes the beer tax as likely to produce 125 millions of revenue. In the event of its passage by the Senate and veto by President Hoover it will produce no revenue. Thus the question of avoiding an extra session of Congress to balance the budget and also to satisfy the demand for farm relief hangs on a slender thread.

How to Save $400,000,000.

New York Times.

If the Democrats in Congress really intend to make "drastic reductions" in Federal expenditures so as to balance the budget in Mr. Roosevelt's first year, the plan submitted by the National Economy League offers an excellent beginning. It shows that $400,000,000 can be saved in the costs of the Veterans' Administration, without any curtailment whatever of benefits to former soldiers injured or disabled in past wars.

Any Place Will Do.

Dayton News.

Senator Borah asserts that if we are to have beer we will have to have places to drink it, but the senator may be surprised to find out how modest our demands will be in the matter of accommodations.

Democratic Hunger March

Boston Transcript.

Senator-elect Duffy, of Wisconsin, says that 600,000 people voted for him, and now about half that number seem to want Government jobs. Other senators speak in the same vein. It looks as though March 4 would see the longest bread line in history.

The Next Treasury Appointment.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Some people declare that they have reason to expect Carter Glass, senator from Virginia, to become Mr. Roosevelt's Secretary of the Treasury. There can be little doubt that the senator has several first-rate qualifications for the place; he has financial knowledge and aptitude, long political experience at the Capital and a native ability to make up his mind and keep it made up.

Senator Glass' qualifications should include another requirement. The next Secretary of the Treasury will handle as important and exacting a task as any at Washington. The task calls for a man of endurance. The senator is well along in his seventies and his health may not be robust enough to sustain him for a long spell of trying work, worry and dispute. If he feels confident that his health will not impair his service those who wish to see matters go right for the next four years will stand ready to welcome his selection for the task. But they will count on him not to overestimate his vigor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Referring to Proposed Coolidge Stamp, Collector Says Only Commemorative Stamp Bears Harding's Picture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that we are to have a Coolidge commemorative stamp, its proponents arguing that the United States has so honored McKinley, Taft, Wilson and Harding. They are in error, notwithstanding the fact that a United States senator is among their ranks. Harding was the only President honored with a special commemorative stamp, in 1923. McKinley's picture appears on the 7-cent 1922 or current series, and Wilson's on the rarely used 17-cent, but both these stamps are merely part of a regular series bearing the portraits of a number of other Presidents. Neither man was honored with a special stamp at the time of his death. When Taft died Martha Washington was displaced on the 4-cent regular issue to allow for his picture, but this stamp can not be classed as a commemorative either.

I am as willing as any other citizen to honor Mr. Coolidge, but this administration might well refrain from adding to its flood of commemoratives by waiting until the new regime comes in. An entire new postage series is likely, and there is no reason to suppose that Mr. Coolidge would be overlooked.

ONE WHO REMEMBERS.

Radical New Deal Must Be Put Into Effect If Civilization Is to Survive.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Slowly the ponderous wheels of our economic system grind along, heedless of the rough road ahead; a system that has failed completely to keep pace with our scientific progress. In it we see the laissez faire of the seventeenth century trying to endure in a modern world.

Our economic structure has about the same chance to succeed in the present crisis as the Persians at Arbela or the "invincible" Armada against the English fleet. Just as the military forces failed dismally against their more progressive opponents, so we are helpless to meet the challenge of evolution.

Our civilization demands quick thinking and quick acting. Instead we are handicapped by slow-moving commissions, collecting data for years, then submitting facts that are already apparent and thus of little importance. We have representatives in our governments, State, local and national, quibbling over petty affairs, while millions are in want. And their efficiency is fostered by an antiquated Constitution.

Steps leading to increase in employment — not charity — must be speedy, for there is no time to lose. The situation is serious, and dilatory tactics invite chaos.

A few vital pieces of legislation that are now being frequently discussed, and which must go into effect at once, are the following: Farm relief by proper regulation of both production and distribution; unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, municipal control of public utilities and, last, but very important, the 30-hour week in all industries at no decrease in wages except where the remuneration is sufficient still to permit the wage earner to live comfortably. M. RADER.

Relief for Debtors Urgently Demanded—Congress Wasting Time and Money.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of January 12 is worthy of unstinted commendation.

We have observed men overburdened with debt that could not reasonably have been avoided, staggering along trying to work out, but so handicapped with their debts, and pressed by creditors, that it was impossible for them to get clear.

Creditor, as well as debtor, would profit in such situation by settlement on a basis, that would enable the debtor to get free so he could continue to be a profitable customer.

The property that comes into the court for bankruptcy settlement is usually consumed by the court, receivers and attorneys, with no more profit to the creditor than to the debtor. The creditor might as well have written off the debt in the beginning and saved his own time and that of the debtor.

If Congress would devote more time to provide for proper supervision of legitimate business to secure justice for all, instead of worse than wasting its time and the people's money, dickering over beer and liquor, it would show far more intelligence than it is now doing. There is imperative need for statesmanship among the administrators of government in legislative, judicial and executive departments.

W. B. WITHERSPOON.

States Drove Out Capital by Overtaxation and Now Are Trying to Lure It Back.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Democrats and Republicans will have to get together to drive out the hell-roaring, lawless, bush-whacker politician from the State legislatures, who has terrorized the capitalist and the big men until they had to retreat to cover in order to save themselves from exorbitant tax bills. Now the States are in a free-for-all fight to see who can offer the best proposition to capital to come out of its secret vaults and again enter the arena with some assurance that it may enjoy protection.

With the cost of Government and the States' tax bills three to four times higher (and these figures are not exaggerated), and with instructed delegates putting through extravagant bills, you can't blame the capitalists for running to some place of safety until the State Legislature has realized its mistake; and with but few exceptions one State is as much at fault as another. THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, one of England's most celebrated advocates, has been briefed by Sir Simon Flaquer, solicitor, to defend his client, Mrs. Paradine, against a charge of murdering her husband, Col. Paradine.

While Mrs. Paradine is in Halloway jail awaiting trial, Lord Horfield is appointed Judge of the case.

Sir Malcolm and his pretty wife, Gay, who bears a subtle resemblance to Mrs. Paradine, have been happily married for ten years, but the husband's obsession with the Paradine case is beginning to cast a dark shadow over their happiness. Sir Malcolm finds himself fascinated by the mysterious blonde, whom he passionately desires to save. Subconsciously he is not wholly convinced of her innocence, but he declares emphatically to Sir Simon that he believes her innocent. Sir Simon is skeptical about the defense Sir Malcolm has prepared, which is to suggest that the colonel's servant, William Marsh, who had been Paradine's batman in the war, might have had a hand in the murder. Sir Malcolm is afraid of Lord Horfield, who seems to have a streak of cruelty that manifests itself toward women who come up for trial before him.

Lady Horfield, in confidence to Sir Malcolm, expresses her fears for Mrs. Paradine.

Col. Paradine had been blinded in the war and had never seen his beautiful wife, who had been a servant before her marriage. She is a Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degradation by a philanthropic American. After a short period in the United States, she had settled in London to earn her living, and had married the rich Col. Paradine after the war.

Sir Malcolm goes alone to the north of England to look over the Paradine home at Hindley. On his return he invites the Horfields to dinner and the theater, against Gay's wishes. The dinner passes off in a friendly enough spirit. Leaving for the theater Keane takes Lady Horfield in his car and Gay accompanies Lord Horfield, who makes love to her, much to her disgust.

When the Paradine trial opens, Gay goes to it with Judith Flaquer, unknown to Malcolm. Mrs. Paradine is put on the stand and testifies that William Marsh had pursued her with unwelcome attentions and that she had as a last resort complained to the colonel the afternoon before he died. Marsh is called to the stand and gives the lie to Mrs. Paradine, testifying that it was she who pursued him.

COUNSEL then asked a number of questions about the life in Eaton Square, with the obvious intention of inducing the witness to acknowledge that her husband's condition of misery and irritability became much worse after he left the retirement of Hindley Hall for London. On her side in her answers she did everything she could to attenuate this alleged condition, which had been spoken to by witnesses.

"I was not unhappy with my husband," she asserted with emphasis. "I understood why he was sometimes miserable and sympathized with him. I never hated him for his occasional impatience. I only pitied him."

Presently counsel said:

"Kindly tells us whether you still assert that Marsh's attentions to you were persisted in while you were living in London?"

A fierce look changed Mrs. Paradine's face and was immediately blotted out, as if her will sprang to the rescue of her momentary inadvertence.

"There was no change," she said in a colorless voice that was in direct contradiction with the expression which had just disappeared.

"So that one of your reasons for coming to London had not turned out quite as you had hoped?" asked counsel, slightly turning toward the jury.

"No."

"Now, on the morning of the day on which he died, was your husband in perfect health, as far as you know?"

"He seemed much as usual?"

"Yes."

"Now, Mrs. Paradine, on the fateful day, did you come to a resolution?"

An utterly blank expression came into the witness' face.

"I do not know what you mean," she said stolidly.

"No? Remembering what happened later you say that?"

"I do not understand."

"Have you ever heard of the expression 'burning one's boats?'"

"I think I have," the witness said vaguely.

"Do you know what that means?"

The witness shook her head.

"I will tell you. It means risking all and coming out with the truth, however horrible and detrimental that may be. Now on the day of your husband's death, when you were shut up in the library alone with him, did you not decide to do this?"

"I do not know what you mean."

"I mean—did you not decide that you could not stand your situation in that house in Eaton Square any longer? And did you not blurt out the truth of the whole matter to your husband?"

Mrs. Paradine made no reply to Sir Joseph for an instant. Then, still looking quite blank, she said:

"I have said that I told my husband about Marsh."

"Now, on your oath, did you not tell your husband that you loved Marsh and had belonged to Marsh?"

"That is a great lie," said the witness, but in a feeble voice that seemed to contradict the words spoken.

"And," persisted counsel, "was not that the cause of your husband's fury, of his summons to Marsh, of the whole scene which followed, of your husband's leaving the library and shutting himself up in the sitting room next to his bedroom, of his solitary dinner, of his refusal to allow Marsh to help him to bed, of his ordering Marsh away, of everything that happened, up till the time of his illness and death?"

"No."

"You deny what I have suggested?"

The witness nodded.

"You still assert that what happened was that you told your husband Marsh had pestered you with his attentions and that you wanted him to be dismissed from his situation on that account?"

The witness nodded.

"Tell the jury!"

"Yes," the witness murmured, not looking toward the jury box.

"Very well!" said Sir Joseph looking straight at the jury.

He then asked the witness some questions about her employment of her time until, after her solitary dinner downstairs, she went to her bedroom to arrange her hair and put some eau de cologne on her forehead.

"Do you swear that when you passed to your room you did not see Marsh coming out of your husband's room?"

"I did not."

"You did not know that Marsh was upstairs on the landing, that when he left your husband's room he remained there for a short time?"

"I did not."

"Do you swear that during the time which elapsed between the departure of Ellen Smith and Marsh and the return of your husband from the lavatory you did not visit his room?"

"I did not."

"And tamper with the glass of Burgundy which stood upon the night table beside his bed?"

"I did not."

"So you heard absolutely nothing of what took place on the landing, Marsh's coming there from your husband's room, your husband's going and coming, Ellen Smith's arrival, her talk with Marsh outside your door, their departure together, your husband's return to his room? Of all this you heard and knew nothing?"

"Nothing."

"When your husband returned to his room did you visit him?"

"No."

"Did you make no effort to see him?"

"No."

"You say you were tired?"

"Yes."

"But you did not retire to bed?"

"No; it was too early."

"You went to the drawing room?"

"Yes."

"And played for perhaps half an hour upon the piano?"

"Yes."

"In spite of this terrible scene which had tired you so much you were able to play difficult waltz music, light music, upon the piano for perhaps half an hour?"

"Music soothes me."

"When you stopped playing you went upstairs to bed?"

"Yes."

"Your maid helped you to bed?"

"Yes."

"Did you sleep?"

"Yes."

"You swear that?"

"Yes."

"So that after this terrible scene with Marsh and your husband you were able first to play brilliantly upon the piano and then go to bed and immediately fall asleep?"

"I slept—after a time."

"We have learned what you say woke you. You heard your husband's voice crying out, 'Marsh! Marsh!'"

"Yes."

"Now did that sound like a call for help?"

The witness hesitated. She was obviously much shaken by the cross-examination and the scene which had preceded it. Her answers now were given in a low voice. Her tall body looked tired. Her pale eyes were usually cast down. Her white face had a dull and weary expression.

"Please answer!"

"Yes," she said, then immediately correcting herself, she added, "No, I do not think it did."

"You have given two contradictory answers. Which do you adhere to?"

"It was just a call."

"For help? Why does a man who is ill, in pain, call out a name? Would it not be a call for help?"

"Perhaps it was."

"Now your husband knew you slept next door to him?"

"Yes."

"But when he found himself in agony, in spite of what happened in the library that evening, he called not for you but for Marsh. Did not that strike you as strange?"

"I suppose—it was," said the witness in an almost toneless voice.

"Did that not suggest to you that even in his agony he wished to have nothing more to do with you?"

"I do not know. I forget."

There was a fading sound in the voice.

Counsel asked a few more questions about the illness and death of Col. Paradine. Then he said:

"You heard my request to his lordship to recall William Marsh for reexamination as to the scene in the library which preceded your husband's death?"

"Yes."

"Having that request in your mind do you still swear that your account of that scene is true?"

"Yes," almost whispered the witness.

"That is all I have to ask you," said counsel.

The witness stood for a moment as if uncertain what to do. Then one of the officers touched her arm. She started violently. The officer whispered something to her. She turned and made her way out of the witness box and back to the dock.

Immediately afterward Sir Joseph renewed his application that William Marsh might be purged of his contempt of court and recalled for further examination.

"I take note of your application and will give my decision as to that after the luncheon interval," Lord Horfield replied, looking toward Keane as he spoke.

The court then adjourned for lunch.

* * * * * * *

When the interval for lunch was over and the court reassembled Keane was in his place. He had eaten nothing, but had drunk a stiff brandy and soda just before he came into court.

As soon as Lord Horfield had taken his seat on the bench he said with a glance through half closed eyes in the direction of Keane:

"Let the witness, William Marsh, who is in custody, be brought up before me."

There was a stir through the court. During the pause which followed it Keane sat looking at Lord Horfield with hatred in his eyes.

Mrs. Paradine sat perfectly still in the dock. She, like Lord Horfield, was gazing at Keane whose eyes were always on the judge. During the interval she seemed to have aged. Many of those in court noticed that. Her curious beauty was surely withering in the sight of all men. But she showed no active emotion.

There was again a stir in the court. Heads were turned. The tall soldierly figure of Marsh appeared walking stiffly in custody. Mrs. Paradine's pale eyes were directed toward him, but she did not move her body. Marsh did not look at her. His eyes were for the judge.

"Release him!" said Lord Horfield.

He then addressed Marsh in a stern voice, rebuking him for his contempt, and pointing out to him the grossness of his conduct, "unparalleled in my experience of the procedure of these courts." While he was speaking Marsh stood rigid like a soldier on parade. Not once did his eyes move from the face of the judge. Having finished his admonition Lord Horfield added that despite Marsh's grave offense his desire to return to the witness box would be acceded to. He concluded his remarks by adjuring Marsh to remember the sanctity of a witness' oath, "taken on the Holy Book," and to unburden his soul of the truth in order that "this terrible conflict" might be resolved in the sacred interest of justice.

"Now go into the box" he said. "Swear him!"

Mr. Karrick is the son of Mrs. James Lawson Karrick, who is the daughter of the late Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court. Others attending the dinner were Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Representative and Mrs. Menacius Lankford, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, Mr. Walter D. Davidge, Mr. and Mrs. Green H. Hackworth and Miss Dorothy Dial. Mrs. Dougherty acted as hostess for Col. Cooper.

At the tea which the International Association of Art and Letters will give this afternoon at the Sears-Roebuck Art Galleries, Mrs. B. J. Perkins, a charter member who has been absent for some time, but is now in town, will be an honor guest. Mrs. J. T. Mander-Scheid and Miss Isabel Furbank will preside at the tea table. One of Pillot's short plays, "Aspiration," will be given by Miss Ethel Claire Randall, and music will be contributed by Mme. Hennenfeldt.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT SUIT.

THE question of playing a hand with a 4-4 distribution rather than with a 5-3 distribution is one which puzzles many players. They are unable to grasp the advantage of being able to retain equal control in both hands and they do not see how it can pay to be occasionally forced down to three trumps immediately.

The following hand concerns the all important question of discards, and the reader will note that if played at six hearts the contract will be defeated, whereas six diamonds is an absolute lay-down.

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ J 4 3 2 ♡ J 10 7 ◇ 10 7 6 5 ♣ K Q
♠ 10 9 6 5 ♡ Q 9 6 ◇ Q 8 4 ♣ 10 7 2	N W E S	♠ K Q 8 7 ♡ 5 3 ◇ 9 2 ♣ J 8 5 4 3
	♠ A ♡ A K 8 4 2 ◇ A K J 3 ♣ A 9 6

The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
2♡(1)	Pass	2NT(2)	Pass
3◇(3)	Pass	4◇(4)	Pass
6◇(5)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Clearly a sound Opening two-bid.

2—While the hand contains more than 1 honor-trick, I believe that this response is the safest. The bidding can not die and it will be quite easy for North to show his extra values later.

3—In spite of the 150 Aces, the second suit should be shown.

4—Not exactly a strength-showing bid, but distributionally, slightly encouraging. Three notrump would completely deny any Slam possibilities.

5—Perhaps a slight overbid, but South knows that his partner holds at least four diamonds. On that basis the heart suit must be available for discards and even only one King in the North hand will make the Slam a good gamble.

The play is fairly obvious. On a spade Opening, Declarer must lay down his Ace-King of diamonds. If this suit breaks 3-2, the location of the Queen does not particularly interest him. Two rounds of clubs and two rounds of hearts will place the lead in the South hand, and the Ace of clubs can then be used to discard the third heart in Dummy. After that a heart can be ruffed, the Queen of diamonds conceded and the remainder of the tricks claimed.

It will be noted that there is no play for six hearts, as the one discard available with the Ace of clubs will not prove sufficient to eliminate the diamond loser.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

M. I. B.: The most common causes of constipation are wrong diet, lack of exercise and the continued use of laxatives. Constipating foods, such as starches, sweets, milk, cheeses, fried and fatty foods, &c., should be entirely avoided. The diet should consist of the naturally laxative foods as fresh and stewed fruits, green vegetables, salads, whole-wheat and bran cereals. Eating some fresh fruit, an apple or a bunch of grapes just before retiring is often very helpful. Daily exercise to strengthen the abdominal muscles is to be recommended, and long walks will be found especially beneficial for this purpose. Send a self-addressed envelope for my bulletin on constipation and for my well-balanced diet and special exercises for the abdomen.

G. I. B.: The dark-haired, brown-eyed person with very fair skin will find all shades of beige becoming; also green in clear, transparent shades, white and silver. All shades of red are especially flattering, as are yellow, red-orange and yellow-orange. Rich, vivid shades of blue and red-violet are good, but not the pastel shades of blue or orchid. Brown is not particularly becoming unless with vivid color contrasts. Black is usually too somber for this coloring and should be avoided along with gray, gold and rich wine shades.

Peggy: Perfume is a matter of individual choice, but the young, slender brunette of 20 to 30 years usually shows a preference for the heavy floral perfumes such as lilac and jasmin, the spicy carnation and the light, fresh "Orientals." If your mother is also dark, I would suggest the light, spicy bouquet perfumes, also rose, chypre and sweet pea. An atomizer should be used to spray perfume on the skin, lingerie and lining of the hat, but do be sure to spray it lightly, as just a little is enough. And rub a little of the perfume on the wrists and palms of the hands as well as touching a bit behind the ears and on the lobes.

* * * *

Willy: Excessive perspiration of the hands may indicate a slight systemic disturbance, and if the following simple home-made remedies do not check the condition it would be well to consult your physician: (1) One ounce of powdered alum dissolved in a pint of hot water, the solution allowed to cool and used as a wash, has been found very effective. It may be used twice a day and should be allowed to dry on the hands. (2) Have your druggist make up a solution of one-half ounce tincture of belladonna and one ounce of alcohol. Apply before going out, giving the solution plenty of time to dry before you put on your gloves.

General toning of the entire system through exercise, diet, fresh air, &c., is important. At various times during the day relax the hands completely, hold the arms at shoulder level or stretched over head, at sides, &c., and shake the hands for several minutes, letting the fingers flap.

What Today Means

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 11:30 p. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 a. m. to 9:15 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m.

It would seem that influences operative on this January 14 will make for a good deal of confusion. Forces will be pulling in various directions and well-laid plans may go "haywire." Time will get away from people generally and there will be more than the usual number of late-kept and broken appointments.

Born on January 14, the child will be possessed of extremely fiery temper. When not ruffled, these children radiate sunny and cheerful dispositions and are seldom depressed. They can usually see the funny side of any situation, regardless of its seriousness; their pleasantly sharp sense of humor will help much to make their burdens light. You can expect results from these youngsters.

If January 14 is your birthday you are inclined to be erratic and flighty. You are a most delightful person, and since no one can gauge at all accurately how you will react to any situation, life is full of surprises when you are about. You have many friends on whom you depend a great deal for companionship, and you are constantly on the go trying to keep in touch with them all. You accept people too readily into the fold of friendship, and more frequently than you like you discover that many of them are but the "fair-weather" type.

Born on January 14, you are a real hustler when it comes to your business. People interest you a great deal, and you enjoy being with them. Your success seems assured in any field of endeavor where it is necessary for you to get out and around and contact people. You are a born sales-type. You are persuasive in your speech, but, regardless of your talking points or manner of presentation, you "get across" because of your sincerity. People will buy from you, will listen to you, will act on your words, because of the qualities of honesty, straightforwardness, truthfulness and dependability which you express. The women born on this date are most independent, but are lacking in egotistical display. They are even-tempered and just. They always meet their obligations and take excellent care of their families.

Fifth Avenue Fashions

Amazingly attractive is this simple day frock.

The dull surface of black crinkly crepe satin made the original. The draped neckline used the shiny surface. The sleeve is cut in sections with quite a puff toward the elbow. The edges have binds of the satin surface of the crepe which tend to give the arm charming length.

Crinkly crepe silk in geranium-red with black trim is another strikingly smart scheme.

It is also interesting made with elbow-length sleeves as seen in miniature back view.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

What Can Sizes Mean?

MRS. GOODBODY came to me with a question. "Why," she wanted to know, "are there so many different sizes in canned goods, and what do the different numbers mean?" She told me that many housewives are puzzled when they go into a grocery store and buy canned goods, and asked me if I couldn't do something about explaining it all.

Of course, you know that a bigger can is needed for whole pears or peaches than for cherries. Then, there are convenient sizes for each food, the sizes which mean the least waste when you open the can.

Every can has the size marked on it in two ways. First, it has the net weight of the contents, in ounces. Then it has the size number of the can.

Here is a table giving sizes, contents and the number of cups of food in the common sizes of cans:

Can Number	Net Weight of Contents	Cupfuls
1	11 ounces	1½
2	20 ounces	2½
2½	28 ounces	3½
3	33 ounces	4
5	3 lbs. 8 ounces	7
10	6 lbs. 8 ounces	13

On the label you will find the quality of the contents. These grades are set up by the United States pure food laws and all canned goods are packed in three grades:

1. Fancy, for which only prime material of uniform quality, color, form and size is used. 2. Extra standard of choice, for which sound material of good stock, particularly uniform as to size and form, is used. 3. Standard, which includes field run of good stock, slightly discolored and irregular in form and size.

Some vegetables, such as corn, tomatoes, some kinds of peas, are canned without any additional water or seasonings. Usually, however, water and seasonings are added.

Fruits are packed in four grades:

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THE CAUSE OF BOILS.

WHEN boils come in crops there is no reason for charging the malady to impure blood. The blood rarely becomes impure in the sense that it serves as a breeding ground for bacteria to be distributed to the skin or to any other part of the body. When it does become impure the probability is that it will clean itself in short order.

The man with crops of boils can not alibi the disorder in his blood. In the main the fault is his own and it lies right out on the surface. If the writer remembers correctly, Job's visitation of boils was because of that prophet's shortcomings. That has been the way ever since the days of Job, at least.

One cause lies in the man's eating habits. Those subject to boils are generally heavy starch and sugar eaters. Some of them transgress enough to cause sugar to appear in the urine, whereupon they are called diabetics. Others transgress only far enough to keep the sugar content of the blood on too high a level.

Therefore, whenever a person is subject to boils he had better eat more meats, eggs and fats and less bread, cereal, cake, desserts and sweets of all kinds—liquid and solid.

The second great cause of repeated boils lies even closer under the sufferer's nose. It is the condition of the skin. Practically all boils are directly due to some one of the staphylococci. These cocci live on the skin and in the scurf thereof. They lie in the mouths of the sweat and grease glands and along the hair shafts. If the skin is kept dry these cocci die rapidly. If a dirty, greasy or wet skin is scratched the cocci lying on the surface gets into the deeper layers, and when they do they pitch in promptly to make a boil, a pimple or a carbuncle.

A poultice or fomentation or anything else that keeps the skin warm and wet is just exactly what the cocci are looking for. If a man has a boil, followed by a crop of daughter boils around, he has no right to blame any one. It is reasonably certain he treated the mother boil by poultices and thus bred new cocci and helped them to get through the skin by macerating, softening and removing some of the protective layers thereof.

The cardinal rule in treating boils is to keep the skin dry and clean. A boil should not be opened until it is quite ripe. A premature incision is liable to spread the infection. Likewise squeezing may spread infection, particularly if the boil is located on the face above the corners of the mouth.

Vaccines are of some service in the treatment of boils. This is especially true of those called staphylococcus, bacteriophage or those made on that principle. It may be that some drugs are of service. Yeast has enjoyed a great vogue at times. There are other remedies in which some have failed. But the two outstanding procedures are to keep the skin dry and clean and protected against scratching and to lessen the consumption of carbohydrate foods.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

DID it ever occur to you to wonder why so many French words and expressions creep into the mode—into style magazines, into collections, into fabrics, trimmings, &c.? Maybe it has, and maybe you have even resented it a bit. But there is no reason for that. The fact is that they creep in and stay in—because there is no adequate translation for them.

That's why it behooves every woman to learn just the least little bit of French, especially if she has a career in or around the merchandising or style world. Or if she cares about style and elegance as an individual; which means every woman in the world, doesn't it?

Certain French words that we use every day are correctly pronounced by us—"beige," for instance, and "rouge." Others, and my pet horror is this one—"lingerie" is almost always mispronounced. The word means underwear, and as I have so often told you—either pronounce it correctly in French, or else say "underwear."

I can think of a lot more—jabot, gilet, godet, are only a few. Then the trouble with "modiste." Unfortunately, almost every American under the U. S. A. sun thinks that a modiste is a dressmaker—whereas a modiste is a milliner, no less. And a dressmaker is a couturiere, or just plain dressmaker.

It would take such a little time to find out for oneself! And the information would be lasting. Let's!

* * * *

So, just for that I have taken the utmost pains to make a leaflet of French words, terms, expressions, which I think are necessary for every woman to know. With much patience, too, I have tried to explain the correct pronunciation as well as the meaning of these words and phrases. You can figure it out all alone, or go over it once with a French teacher or maid, and have it down pat. A stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to the Dare Department of The Washington Post will bring this leaflet to you, and I hope that every single Dah-ray fan will send for this and study it. It will be well worth while, I do assure you.

* * * *

The Beauty Sorceress.

"What does it matter if you aren't one of the fortunates whose glands, pores and secretions function in the harmony necessary to produce beautiful hair? It's just unfortunate, but not irreparable.

"Beautiful hair depends not upon length, thickness or color, straightness or curliness. It depends upon health of the hair, no less. And this is something that the proper care and attention can assure, if nature does not do it for you automatically."

* * * *

There's going to be lots of talk about beach dresses replacing pyjamas, but don't be alarmed. Many a couturiere is sticking to pyjamas, although none are insisting upon them—for beach wear, that is. It's a matter more of choice than anything else—either a beach pyjama or a beach dress or beach apron, my dear—as you wish.

Au revoir.

Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Fresh Strawberries Selling Cheaper Now Than in Memory of Local Winter Dealers; Bakery Again Offers Popular Whipped Cream Pies.

Fresh strawberries may glorify the Sunday breakfast or dinner even though January is very much with us. And strawberries in January, this year, do not mean extravagance, for some markets are selling them for 35 cents a quart. Large quantities have been arriving in Washington this week from Florida. One wholesale dealer in the Southwest market handled 20,000 pints of strawberries this week, buying them in truckloads and in parts of carloads.

"Strawberries have never been so cheap in January within my memory," the dealer says. "A year ago the wholesale price was about what is asked at retail today." Berries are no more plentiful than they were last year, he said, but the general decrease in food prices has covered even winter strawberries.

Fresh strawberry tarts, too, are possible as a Sunday treat this week, because a pastry shop on G street, well known for its delicious concoctions, is going to sell them at $1 a dozen. The strawberry tarts are among other French pastries that are to sell at that price, including eclairs, Napoleons and mocha tarts.

Alligator pears, the largest seen for many weeks in fruit and vegetable stands, are featured among this week's food arrivals. They are known as "nines," so large that only nine of them fill the usual packing box for avocados. Even though their price is high, about 50 cents, the pears are not extravagant, for several servings may be made from one pear.

Broccoli is especially appealing among the green things on the market this week. Its price of 25 cents for three pounds in a chain store is as appealing as its quality. Among the other green vegetables new cabbage is attracting many buyers, and spinach, kale and turnip greens are unusally good. Cucumbers, too, are particularly good for this season.

Among the canned goods values that the Meanderer found this week, canned asparagus tips at two cans for 23 cents in a chain store are exceptional. The cans are one-pound size. Another bargain at an extremely low cost is one of the best brands of pork and beans at four cans for 19 cents.

When a bakery declares its wares are home made, the shopper wonders how it can be that commercial products can be labeled home made. The Meanderer found the explanation of this in one bakeshop. The manager confided that one of the cake recipes most used by his bakers—who are all women, by the way—is the one printed on a cake-flour box found in nearly every home kitchen. Cakes made by this method are often iced in this bakeshop's windows, within sight of passersby. Today cup cakes made from this well-known recipe are being iced as described, and are selling for 23 cents a dozen, rather than for the usual price of 35 cents. A Lady Baltimore layer cake, 75-cent value, is on sale today for 59 cents in this shop.

Two reports of "business getting better" among food sellers are among the Meanderer's food data for this week. Many dealers in fresh fruits and vegetables are represented in one report, coming from the president of an important produce men's association, who declared that in general his associates feel encouraged about food market conditions. Though prices are still low, demand has quickened slightly, he said.

Half-size whipped cream pies of the same kind that pleased so many of the Meanderer's readers recently, are being offered by a G street pastry shop today for 25 cents. The pies, of real whipped cream, are flavored with lemon, chocolate or burnt almonds.

Small green eggplants in glass jars, stuffed with celery, parsley and seasonings, are among the imported good things that may appeal to the hostess who desires the unusual for her winter parties. Each eggplant may be cut into three or four helpings that are served among appetizers. These glass jars of eggplant cost only 30 cents in a Ninth street importer's shop.

The price of turkeys has increased appreciably since the holidays. This fact is accounted for by a wholesale poultry dealer in the Southwest market, who says that farmers decidedly decrease the amount of produce they bring to market in January, as compared with their December market outputs. The impassable roads, in many cases, account for the farmers' less frequent trips. So the scarcity of farm products at the present time has meant in many items an increase of as much as 10 per cent.

Directed Verdict Ends Damage Case

Woman Author's Story Is Called Avaricious Falsehood.

Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Alma Newton Anderson's story of how Ernest R. Graham, architect, wooed her nine years and then married another was cut short today by an order from the judge for a verdict against her.

Mrs. Anderson, author, musical success, and member of a prominent Louisiana family, had sought $500,000 damages on the grounds that after jilting her the wealthy architect conspired with private detectives to besmirch her reputation. She spent three years getting the case to court and only two hours on the witness stand.

Defense attorneys said the suit was fabricated on falsehoods of an avaricious woman.

Judge Paul McWilliams gave no reason for the directed verdict, but it came after attorneys had conferred an hour in the judge's chambers. Asked if there had been a settlement for his client, Attorney Leo Hana said: "My lips are sealed, but you can read between the lines." Graham's attorneys also indicated a settlement had been made.

Following his address, Dr. Jones will answer a number of questions. He has recently interviewed many important leaders in both China and Japan.

Governor Advises Foreclosure Dela

Wisconsin Judges Asked to Suspend Calling of Mortgages.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Circuit judges of Wisconsin tonight pondered a suggestion, made in a formal proclamation by Gov. A. G. Schmedeman, that for the time being they refrain from enforcing the law on mortgage foreclosures. The governor promised the Legislature would go to work immediately on a new law designed to save the homes and occupations of an increasing number of Wisconsin farmers who were being dispossessed. The administration bill would provide a three-year moratorium.

Indications were that judges, while disposed to be as lenient as possible in foreclosure cases, were divided in opinion as to whether compliance with the governor's proclamation was possible.

Milwaukee County's eight circuit judges announced they would support the governor.

SAILOR LAD COMES AS POET LAUREATE

John Masefield Reads Own Works in Beautifully Modulated Voice.

By ELISABETH T. POE.

In the late nineties of the last century a young English sailor with a gift for rhymning yarns about the sea came to American in search of better fortune. He stayed here several years, engaged in lowly occupations in New York and other cities and then disappeared.

Yesterday the former sailor lad John Masefield, poet laureate of England, lineal poetic successor of Chaucer, Ben Jonson, Dryden, Southey, Wordsworth, Tennyson, Alfred Austin and Robert Bridges held enchanted for two hours a well-nigh capacity audience at the New National Theater in a reading of his own poems. It was Mr. Masefield's only appearance in Washington during his present tour of the United States. Diplomatic, official, social and literary Washington turned out to do him high honor.

In a stage box was Lady Lindsay, wife of Sir Ronald Lindsay, the Ambassador of Great Britain, who had a party of friends with her, including Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Justice Introduces Reader.

Mr. Masefield was introduced by former Justice Edward Stafford, of the District Supreme Court, himself a poet of no small renown. Justice Stafford pointed out that not all laureates have been great poets and not all poets have won laurels during life. The English-speaking world, he declared is always interested in selection of a poet laureate by Great Britain. When Mr. Masefield was appointed it was particularly interesting "because America had long before chosen him for that post even before the dream came true."

The audience was not disappointed when Mr. Masefield, who is the leader of the movement at Oxford to reestablish the sound habit of reading poetry aloud wherever possible, with but introduction, began reading from his poems and prose narratives.

He was an impressive figure, this English gentleman of fine face with deep, dark eyes, gray hair and quiet, but dynamic manner, who recited in a mellow, beautifully modulated voice, using exquisite diction and earnestness of interpretation in his own masterpiece.

"Salt Water Ballads" First.

He began with recitations from the "Salt Water Ballads" and several prose narratives of the sea. It was not long before it was realized that here was one who loved the sea, who knew its magic and like other seafaring men in all ages and climes, had gazed on this majestic spectacle of nature in many moods and colors. "Sea-Fever," a short, but beautiful poem, aroused the audience to the ovation stage. Again and again this form of enthusiasm evinced itself in applause from an audience that now and then was so engrossed with the sheer beauty of his reading and the text of his poems that it did not break the spell by applause.

The audience agreed with Justice Stafford's opinion after Mr. Masefield recited his poem, "August, 1914," that had he written nothing else this poem alone should have qualified him as poet laureate.

Mr. Masefield's latest work was represented in the afternoon's program by an animated recitation of "Minnie Maylow's Story," in which his innate gift of humor was apparent.

Due probably to time limitation, Mr. Masefield did not recite what is probably one of the best known of his poems, "The Widow in the Bye Street."

The audience was waiting also for "The Everlasting Mercy," but had to be content when the poet laureate used only the last three wonderful and exquisite stanzas of it as what might be called an epilogue to his remarks and readings.

"Sleeping Beauty" To Be Seen Today

Children From Homes Will Be Guests at Theater Performance.

Children from Friendship House, the Neighborhood House and the Weightman School for crippled children will be guests of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at the performance of "Sleeping Beauty" to be given this morning at the National Theatre by the Children's Theatre of New York City.

Among the group from the Friendship House that will be entertained are the Jolly Actors, a dramatic organization made up of youngsters from 9 to 14, the Girl Reserves and the Brownie Scouts. The Rotary Club will provide a bus to transport these and other groups representing the institution.

Mrs. Roland Jefferson will be in charge of a party of 25 children from the Weightman School.

Winchester Store, Last In State Chain, Closes

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 13.—The Bell Clothes Shop, Inc., a large men's furnishing store here, today filed an assignment in Corporation Court naming Warren Rice, local attorney, as trustee. Liabilities of the firm which were listed totaled more than $9,000, while no statement of assets was made, but observers estimated the value of the stock of goods at about $2,000.

Assignment by the shop here marked the end of a chain of stores conducted under the name of Bell Clothes Shop, the others being at Front Royal and Strasburg. S. G. Shendow, said to have been from Pittsburgh, headed the firm, with F. Switzenbaum, of Baltimore, as secretary.

Michigan Balks Georgia Chain-Gang Extradition

Lansing, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Gov. Comstock late today denied the request of the State of Georgia for the extradition of Willie (alias Jesse) Crawford, chain-gang fugitive. Crawford, a Negro, escaped from the Fulton County Prison camp last April. He was serving a one-to-three-year term for automobile theft.

The governor followed the recommendation of George Murphy, assistant attorney general, who held a hearing in which several persons charged that to send Crawford back would be to subject him to inhuman tortures.

"THE BITTER TEA OF GENERAL YEN." Columbia Pictures' filmization of the novel by Mrs. Grace Zaring Stone, adapted to the screen by Edward Paramore, featuring Nils Asther, Barbara Stanwyck, Walter Connolly and Toshia Mori, with Gavin Gordon, Lucien Littlefield, Clara Blandick, Richard Loo and Helen Jerome Eddy. Directed by Frank Capra. Reviewed from midnight preview.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Shrewdly utilizing the full potentialities of the Grace Zaring Stone novel as a source of action-drama of the most picturesque and exciting sort, and subordinating the psychological aspects of the clash between the New England viewpoint and the inscrutable mental processes of the cultured Oriental to the desirability of vivid situations and thrilling climaxes, Columbia, the producer, and Frank Capra, the director, have made an intelligent, interesting and insistently beautiful picture of "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen."

With the period of the story brought down to incidents considerably more recent than those touched upon by Mrs. Stone in Shanghai and Chapel, Capra has contrived scenes of war-torn China that are amazingly and terrifyingly realistic. They supply the motivating impulses for later developments that are attended by a complete apprehension of the glamor, the limpid beauty and the flashing splendor that characterized the life of the intellectual bandit who chose to hold a young American girl captive through a brief interval of physical and mental turmoil, which ended in the sacrifice of his own life—although not in the manner set forth in the book.

If one were to go in for literary exhumations, the shadowy skeleton of Edith M. Hull's "The Sheik" might be unearthed as the distant ancestor of this colorful tale of misunderstood intentions, twisted purposes, treachery and predatory warfare in a province ruled in his own efficient way by a suave, educated and highly polished cosmopolite who played a hazardous game for high stakes—and lost.

But "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen" does not need to be bolstered by analogies or propped up by borrowed strength. It is a peculiarly sane screen drama that consistently avoids the overemphasis and the exaggeration that might so easily convert it into a cheap and grotesque piece of melodramatic claptrap. It moves at times deliberately, but seldom falsely.

This is primarily due to the unexpectedly fine performance of Nils Asther in the role of Gen. Yen Tso-Chong, overlord of an extensive province which he milks dry of treasure, with the invaluable assistance of one Jones, his American financial adviser—Schultz he was in the book, a coarse, ribald, drinking fellow, but one who knew how to get the money—played by that peerless character actor, Walter Connolly. Mr. Asther suffered an almost complete eclipse with the coming of sound and dialogue as a result of an accent that seemed a bit incorrigible. His portrayal here signalizes the rebirth of the man as an actor of rare discretion, admirable poise and an ingratiating and charming personality.

Mr. Connolly's, as usual, is an especially effective piece of work, too, although his opportunities are in no wise comparable to Mr. Asther's. Barbara Stanwyck, to this observer, is a keen disappointment in the role of Megan Davis, the spirited, but youthful, American who attempts to match wits with a man she can not understand, but somehow manages to respect. Miss Stanwyck, while sincere and authoritative enough, is wholly deficient in those qualities of mind and heart that were Megan Davis' most conspicuous traits. Toshia Mori, a newcomer to roles of the Anna May Wong stamp, and one of the WAMPAS' "baby stars of 1932," justifies her sudden eminence by an excellent depiction of the lovely little traitor attached to Gen. Yen's entourage. Clara Blandick, Gavin Gordon, Helen Jerome Eddy, Richard Lou and numerous others lend excellent support.

Director Capra has done magnificently with the scenes of fire, bloodshed and riot in Shanghai, and has provided a later gorgeousness of setting at Gen. Yen's summer palace that has supplied inspiration for some exquisite photography by Joseph Walker.

The supplementary program is led by a single-reel feature, "Down on the Farm," a human interest subject of unfailing appeal, and includes an Aesop Fable cartoon comedy, "Yard of Wool," and a new issue of the Pathe News, in which Senators Pittman, of Nevada, and Dill, of Washington, discuss the saving powers of silver in this period of economic crisis.

COLUMBIA

"RED HAIRED ALIBI." Tower Productions picturization of the novel by Wilson Collison, featuring Merna Kennedy, Theodor Von Eltz, Grant Withers and Purnell Pratt, with Huntley Gordon and Shirley Temple. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Reviewed Friday night by M. A. McKavitt.

Here is, perhaps, the last of a long line of pictures featuring the racketeer. However, the more realistic and vicious elements of gangdom have been so mollified that, although "Red Haired Alibi" is less spectacular, it is a drama so well acted and so intelligently directed that many will find it preferable to the more sensational tux-clad "thug" creations of the past.

Theodor Von Eltz, one of the more polite and commanding crooks of the cinema, notices the charming red-haired clerk at the perfume counter of a hotel in a small city in Ohio. Merna Kennedy, later finds Mr. Von Eltz delightful company. Before leaving, Von Eltz promises her a job in New York if she ever comes there.

Not long after, the hotel is torn down to make way for a new office building and we see the young lady speeding toward the big city. Before she makes connections with her future employer, she meets Grant Withers, a rich young man from White Plains, N. Y., who takes her to the "Follies." Mr. Withers has been having some marital difficulties and doubts if his wife would care much.

When Mademoiselle Kennedy is down to her last dollar she meets Von Eltz, a "big shot," and is hired on the spot. Her salary is $100 per week. She is given $500 for clothes. Her duties? To look well-bred and keep her mouth shut. To be near the telephone day and night.

The revelations that follow will easily hold your close attention. The red-head was innocent but not dumb. Courageous but not lacking in ideals.

The acting throughout is competent. Merna Kennedy, Von Eltz and Purnell Pratt easily win the honors.

The annual rodeo at Salina, Calif., partly done in color, was rather a complete display of cowboy and cowgirl horsemanship and daring. A "Terry Toon" cartoon, "Ireland or Bust," was weak in Celtic characteristics but strong in American comedy. A particularly interesting Paramount News completes the bill.

When a gentleman is pursued by two such charming and persistent beauties as Carole Lombard and Dorothy Mackail, what is there to do about it? Clark Gable is reported to learn the answer in "No Man of Her Own," the magic lantern show now on view at Loew's Palace Theater.

EARLE

"THE BILLION DOLLAR SCANDAL." Paramount picturization of an original story by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, featuring Robert Armstrong, Constance Cummings, Olga Baclanova, Frank Morgan and James Gleason. Directed by Harry Joe Brown. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The millennium has come! Sixty-seven years ahead of time, but it's here! A radio star making a personal appearance without a microphone!

Accordingly, it becomes your reporter's unmitigated pleasure to accord the laurels, not only for such an unusual performance, but for the most delightful personal appearance of a radio performer yet to be seen on a Washington stage, to Grace Hayes, who climaxes an excellent cycle of character songs with an impersonation of Pola Negri singing "Paradise."

But the "mike" is not a total stranger to the act, for, as an encore, the curtains part, revealing a huge mask, out of which ostensibly emanate some of the most pungent burlesques of radio's celebrities yet to tickle these ears. The voice soon is materialized, and Lynn Hayes, the star's son, a personable lad no less ingratiating than his charming mother, takes his bows—both most deserving of the tumultuous ovation they received.

Before it is forgotten, let us refer to the feature film attraction, "The Billion Dollar Scandal," a picturization of the late and very lamented, Teapot Dome affair. Just how true a translation it is of what happened, or what liberties have been taken with fact, is not of especial moment. But as a story of Frank "Fingers" Partos, who becomes the "champeen" of 120,000,000 people burnt in that affair, and his efforts not only to see justice done but to get revenge on his own account, the "Scandal" is just a bit disappointing.

A good, average program picture, this, with a modicum of laughs sprinkled in by James Gleason and Warren Hymer, some tense drama furnished by Robert Armstrong and love interest by Constance Cummings and Frank Albertson.

Others in the highly acceptable cast include Irving Pichel, Frank Morgan, Berton Churchill, Sidney Toler, Edmund Breese and Purnell Pratt. "The Billion Dollar Scandal," understand, is far from boring or tedious, but its importance as the week's main attraction pales in comparison with the stage show.

Opening the bill, announced by Maxine Doyle, all togged out in the first showing of spring models, is the team of Sylvia and Clemence, assisted by the Andrini Brothers, masters of the frets and plectrums. While the girls' songs are not too hot, their tap dance to the "Poet and Peasant Overture" is.

Joe Laurie, jr., with the help of "Niece" Betty Riley and "Nephew" Carl Ritchie, offers an entertaining melange of chatter, song and dance. Those "two American boys from France," Les Gellis, are clever acrobatic dancers who, for an encore, dispute Mr. Laurie's claim to half-pintness by presenting the half-gill George, a midget performer who practically steals the act from the Gellis.

Completing the bill, and presenting an above-ordinary series of short subjects, are a Looney Tune, "Bosko's Woodland Daze," a release of the Screen Souvenir series, featuring Anna Held and an old-fashioned mellerdrama with Francis X. Bushman, and an issue of the Universal News.

LOEW'S FOX

"FLESH." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Edmund Goulding, adapted to the screen by Leonard Praskins and Edgar Allan Woolf, with dialogue by Moss Hart, featuring Wallace Beery, Karen Morley, Ricardo Cortez and Jean Hersholt, with John Miljan, Vince Barnett and Edward Brophy. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Soggy with the sentimentalism of the great but inexplicable love of an ox-like German waiter, who turns professional wrestler for a moll who didn't deserve it; caked in the alleged crookedness of the rassalin' racket and pretty far-fetched in its climax and final fadeout, this newest vehicle for one of the most popular actors on the screen is probably just enough saturated with the good old hokum to click at the box office.

"Flesh," however, is not another "Champ." Instead of being the champ in this one, Wallace Berry is the chump, although in the last flicker or two of the last reel I believe he does clamp a few crotch-holts and bear-hugs onto the younger of the Zybysko boys, Vladek, eventually hoisting him into one of Jeemy Londos' airplane spins and crashing him out of the title. But what I started to say was that "Flesh" lacks that splendid cohesiveness, the fine basis of affection between father and son and the general, all-around believability of the earlier hit, based on the traditions of the prize ring. The present work is a sporadic and spotty affair, split up into a succession of episodes that are almost as disjointed as a long line of blackouts.

The one sound, substantial and tangible virtue that holds the whole business together is the genuinely moving and consistently sustained acting of Wallace Beery. The role of Polakai, goodness knows, is pretty hard to take, but Beery imbues it with a bungling, clumsy, unquenchable sort of tenderness that leaves a lasting impression after every other memory of the film has faded.

The actual wrestling is limited to three short sequences and comprises merely an inferential background for the more intimate domestic adventures of the heavyweight waiter who saved a no-good gal from the police, married her out of the depths of his profound stupidity and then sacrificed everything he cherished to the clandestine perfidy of his wife and her former lover, his own manager and the father of the child he thought was his. While the bouts are on, though, the pushing and hauling and grunting and grimacing all seems in the best cauliflower manner and faithful to the most treasured precepts of gentlemanly mayhem and modified murder.

There are numerous sequences in which Mr. Beery and his associates furnish no little amusement, of a dull-witted and slow-moving sort, but to my mind the one in the hall of Herr Polakai's dormitory, just outside the bathroom, where the nightshirt parade is staged by roomers of both genders, is not one of them.

Karen Morley is a very tough tough-girl indeed, as the cause of Mr. Beery's major discomfitures, and Ricardo Cortez, her lover, renders an excellent accounting of a thoroughly distasteful part. Jean Hersholt and Greta Mayer are well typed as the proprietor of the Kaiserhof Biergarten and his wife and John Miljan is disappointingly conventional as the "big shot" of the mat game who tells his boys when to win and when to lose, depending on how much dough is in the gate. The rest are merely "bits"—even Vince Barnett!

On the stage, Frank and Milt Britton and their lunatic band play their usual havoc with themselves and their audience as the foremost item on a bill of considerable variety. Bob Hope, another genial nut, acts as master of ceremonies and finally puts on too long an act with the aid of a female and three male accomplices. "Antics of 1933" it is called, although there are moments when "Antiques" seems the word.

Jerome Mann, in a "One Mann Revue," offers as clever a lot of impersonations as have been put on here in years—Jessel, Chevalier, Pat Rooney, "Singin' Sam," Crosby, Columbo, Vallee, Winchell, Bernie, Wynn, anyone you like—and all without the aid of makeup. Mady and Partner are extraordinary acrobats, especially the girl, and Betty Jane Cooper and the Lathrop Brothers offer a dancing act of real distinction.

The Fox Movietone News completes the bill. Mr. Lampkin and his overture being a. w. o. l., or something.

PALACE

"NO MAN OF HER OWN." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Maureen Watkins and Milton H. Gropper, from a story by Edmund Goulding and Benjamin Glazer, starring Clark Gable with Carole Lombard, Dorothy Mackaill, Grant Mitchell and Elizabeth Patterson. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

Frivolous, inconsequential but amusing is this story of a crooked gambler and a blonde who was sick of small towns.

The less said about the plot the better; the more said along with the plot the better, for the dialogue is crisp and easy.

Babe Stewart isn't even a smooth gambler. He's the kind who has a feminine come-on, an extra pack of already stacked cards, a partner or so to deal those cards, and a pair of trays to everyone else's duo of duces. Affairs in the big city getting a little hot through the activities of Collins of the vice squad and threats of discarded blonde Kay, Babe tosses a coin, punches a hole in a timetable, and heads for Glendale, the sticks. Glendale he finds to be a sleepy, 9 o'clock town inhabited by Connie, a would-be 12 o'clock gal. Another tossed coin, a wedding ring, and back to the big city, all serene until Connie spots the stacked deck and unstacks it.

As you see, it needs speedy and nice playing—and gets it. It takes a foursome to make a good card game on most of Babe's winning evenings, and it takes a foursome, Clark Gable, Carole Lombard, the always welcome Grant Mitchell and Elizabeth Patterson, to make a lot of rather good fun out of this story about those evenings. J. Farrell MacDonald, Dorothy Mackaill and George Barbier help out in their brief moments in the Klieg lights.

The chore which Paramount gave Gable when it borrowed him was no easy job, for the poor young man is not only introduced as the king of hearts but has to beam and beam and beam as a 100-horsepower ladykiller for the first third or so of the picture. It is hard to tell whether it is Babe Stewart, or Clark Gable being Babe Stewart, that made us want to shout "no more personality, please," but since Babe is obviously that sort of person and Gable hasn't been heretofore, we'll blame it on Babe. Anyhow Gable is much more likeable and extremely easy during the last two-thirds of the film.

Carole Lombard is pretty, and pretty nice, as Connie, who is almost as at-the-drop-of-a-hat in her decisions as Babe. Her gowns are, oh my! Grant Mitchell is no end amusing.

It's a minor complaint, but we're getting awfully tired of seeing ladies and gentlemen in shower baths, even if they are Carole Lombard and Clark Gable.

An interesting travelogue to Moscow, a musical short, Charlie Chase in an absolutely insane comedy, "Mr. Bride," which had Friday's audiences in stitches, and a newsreel complete the bill.

METROPOLITAN

"TWENTY THOUSAND YEARS IN SING SING." First National picturization of Warden Lewis E. Lawes' book, adapted to the screen by Wilson Mizner and Brown Holmes, featuring Spencer Tracy, Arthur Byron, Bette Davis and Warren Hymer. Directed by Michael Curtis. Reviewed by Dorothea Lewis.

A trifle of its merit probably due to memories of the very great merit of the book, the title and the spirit, if not the letter, of which it carries on, "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing-Sing" is a film well worth a second week's showing and possessing acting well worth a second seeing.

Spencer Tracy, as Tom Connors, the convict whose prison life is traced from conviction to the death house, and Arthur Byron, as the warden, are exceptional, forceful and affecting in their respective roles. Bette Davis is vivid and excellent in a comparatively small, but extremely important, part.

There are a few too many "good fellows" in this pictorial Sing-Sing, unfortunately making for glorification rather than the sympathy and understanding chronicled by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, for, although he is superlatively human, he is not soft and sentimentally so, and he has his bad men and his really "tough guys" to deal with sternly, just as he has his unfortunates, and misjudged. And although the picture may make you hate and attack capital punishment, as Warden Lawes hates and attacks it, it will be because you like Tom Connors, condemned prisoner, not because, as in Warden Lawes' case, you deprecate the injustices, hysteria and mental hazards of juries and public.

However, even with a different slant from that of Warden Lawes, the picture somehow projects his fairness and his problems in an altogether authentic and moving manner. He himself is reported as finding it good.

Witches and Fairies Roam Carolinas, Indians Believe

Report to Smithsonian Reveals Details of Great Smoky Cherokees' Faith in "Little People" Supposed to Inhabit Mountains.

(Associated Press.)

Real witches, wizards and fairies cavort to this day among North Carolina's great Smoky Mountains—real, at least, to the Cherokee Indians who live there.

The Cherokee's imagination peoples the woods, rocks and streams of the remote Great Smoky country with as many supernatural beings as any child's fairy tale, says report to the Smithsonian Institution by Dr. Frans Oldbrechts.

Should you meet a Cherokee witch among the mountains, shoot him with a bullet around which is wound one of the hairs of your head, old folk of the tribe will tell you. But before you can shoot the witch you must see him in his regular human form. To do this you must fast until sunset for seven days, and drink a concoction made from a shrub which is believed to give the witches themselves some of their power.

Instead of a witch, however, you may meet the "two little red men," sons of the thunder, friendly fellows who may be recognized by their peaked caps of purple and red, and who always travel together.

Also usually friendly to men are the "little people," akin to the European fairies, who are very small with long hair falling to their heels. They live in colonies like humans, hold dances and councils, and lonely travelers at night may sometimes hear the sounds of their music and dancing, the Cherokees say. Sometimes the little people forget their kindness and cause disease, especially among children.

Ghosts, at least Cherokee ghosts, are creatures whose attentions are well meant but unwelcome. Because they are homesick in the ghost land to the west, they try to make their friends and relatives ill so that they will die and join them.

Dreaming of a dead relative is considered the first symptom of disease, so the Cherokees try to blot out the memory of the dead by merrymaking, no matter how much they may feel the loss.

Most feared of all are the witches and wizards, human beings believed to possess supernatural powers of evil. They try to take the life of their victims and add it to their own, the Indians say, by stealing their breath. Witches can take the forms of animals and fly through the air or travel underground. Often they appear as ravens or earthworms.

Coming of a witch, the tribe lore says, can be detected by dropping powdered tobacco on hot ashes. If a particle of the tobacco catches fire it shows by its position the direction from which the witch is approaching.

Farley Congratulates Republican on Election

Oklahoma City, Jan. 13 (A.P.). Imagine the surprise of State Senator George A. Hutchinson, of Enid, when he opened a letter today and found he had been congratulated by James A. Farley, Democratic national committee chairman, on his victory in the November election.

Mr. Farley also expressed appreciation because Hutchinson had continually helped "the national ticket."

"I appreciate your kindness," replied Hutchinson, "but I must disclaim any responsibility for the success of the Democratic national ticket. I was in no wise instrumental."

Hutchinson boasts whenever opportunity presents that he was the only Republican member of the Oklahoma Senate to be returned to office.

PENTHOUSE BANDITS GET $50,000 JEWELS

Rich Merchant, Chauffeur Bound; $100,000 in Gems Saved.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Jewelry valued at $50,000 was stolen from the penthouse apartment of Isaac Keller by two calm young robbers, who surprised the wealthy hairgoods merchant in his sleep, bound and gagged him with one of his own shirts, and ransacked the apartment for 40 minutes.

Herbert Lipsky, the Keller chauffeur, appeared as they were leaving and he, too, was bound.

After Keller had protested that only his wife, who was at a bridge party, knew the combination to a safe, the pair sought in vain to break it open, then gave up and left.

They left behind in the safe jewelry Keller said was worth $100,000.

The robbery occurred at 9:50 o'clock last night, but was not disclosed by police until today.

The Keller penthouse bandits told employes of the building they had a parcel to deliver to the merchant. They apparently entered the apartment with a key.

Keller said he had been asleep about fifteen minutes when they appeared in his bedroom and pointed pistols at him.

Failing to obtain the combination to the safe, they bound and gagged him with strips of a shirt and threw a sheet over him.

When Lipsky appeared the pair was leaving by way of a clothes closet door leading into the hall. Thinking them friends of his employer, he showed them to the elevator. Then they returned to the apartment and bound Lipsky. They ransacked the apartment once more before leaving a second time.

Although bound to a chair, the chauffeur managed to inch his way across the room, knock the receiver from the telephone and call for help.

Experts to Investigate 'Lindbergh's' Signature

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—An order permitting handwriting experts to examine the original of a contract for newspaper clippings, which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was alleged to have signed, was issued today by Supreme Court Justice Charles Dodd in Brooklyn. The order was served on Harry W. Moore, Mineola, N. Y., attorney, who represents Walter Hyams.

Hyams sued Lindbergh for $7,000, alleging that the flier contracted to pay 4 cents each for clippings of news stories about him. Lindbergh, in his answer, stated that the agreement was for Hyams to furnish not more than $35 worth of clippings.

SATURDAY JANUARY 14, 1933 SPORTS

CENTRAL FIVE DEFEATS TECH IN 41-TO-36 THRILLER

This Morning with Shirley L. Povich

CONNIE MACK announces to the world by medium of a dazzling blue, white and silver leaflet, which wins the engravers' union pennant, that he will ship 30 players to the Athletics' spring training camp at Fort Myers, Fla., to see what can be done about the American League race next season.

But the item that hits this department smack in the eye is the familiar elephant insignia of the A's which forms a pastel background for the names on the club's roster. It is the same old elephant with the same old Haw! Haw! smile beneath his upraised trunk, but Jumbo this winter is wrapping his trunk around a pennant and the pennant is inscribed "1933," as if the Athletics meant business in next season's flag race.

Connie Mack has not yet ventured a prediction of the outcome of the race next season, but there can be no mistaking the thought in the club's official leaflet released yesterday. If Jumbo doesn't deliver unto Mr. Mack the pennant that he's flaunting so haughtily on the frontispiece, somebody is due to get his unconditional release, probably Jumbo.

Earnshaw and Simmons Favor Yanks.

Mr. Mack has read, no doubt, of the predictions of one of his pitching stars, George Earnshaw, and his erstwhile pal, Al Simmons, that the race will be over by the last of July with the Yankees making a runaway of it. How well these predictions set with the mahout of the A's dugout this department has not learned, but at least there appears to be some doubt of the ability of Jumbo to stake his 1933 pennant on top of the American League heap.

Conspicuously absent from the club roster of the A's are the names of Simmons, Jimmy Dykes and Mule Haas, who were sold outright to the White Sox to ease the Philadelphia pay roll, which already had begun to show the strain of no Sunday baseball games at home. Of course, Mr. Mack did not dispose of this trio without concern for replacements, and he expects to find these fresh troops among his eight infielders and six outfielders he is sending to Florida.

Mack Depending on Three Rookies.

Mule Haas already had been partially dislodged from his center field post last season by Ed Coleman and Roger Cramer, but none in the A's company had threatened to oust Simmons from his left field berth or Dykes from third base, and these are the problems that beset Mr. Mack next season.

Until he suffered a broken ankle, Coleman, a Coast League recruit, had played inspired baseball for 26 games, batting .342 and giving indications of supplanting Haas permanently. Cramer, alternating with the aging Bing Miller in right field, slugged the ball for .336 in 92 games and that he would do as a regular was certain. But neither can lay claim to being an Al Simmons.

Barring a shift of Eric McNair from shortstop, Frank Higgins, a big Coast League recruit, will be given the job of assuaging the situation at third base as a result of Dykes' departure. Thus Mack will go back to the American League wars gambling heavily on three rookies.

Net Shake-up Revealed in Rankings

First Ten Is Juggled With Vines Heading 1932 Ratings.

Allison Given No. 2; Lott Drops From Second to 11th.

By FOSTER HAILEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A wholesale shake-up of the first ten in both men and women's singles was made today by the ranking committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association in its recommendations for national rankings for 1932.

The lists, to be acted on by the national convention of the U. S. L. T. A., next month, are headed by the California holders of the American championships, H. Ellsworth Vines, jr., for the second straight year among the men, and Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, for the first time among the women.

Five of 1931 "First Ten" Women Repeat.

Otherwise, only five of the 1931 first ten among the women are given top ranking for 1932, while in the men's ranks, George M. Lott, jr., No. 2 in 1931, is dropped to No. 11 for 1932 and seven of the others are shifted.

Wilmer Allison, semifinalist against Henri Cochet, in the nationals, and an outstanding player on the United States Davis Cup Team, was rewarded with an advance from No. 9 to second place behind Vines. The rankings follow with the 1931 ratings in parenthesis:

1. H. Ellsworth Vines (1).
2. Wilmer Allison (9).
3. Clifford Sutter (6).
4. Sidney B. Wood (7).
5. Francis X. Shields (3).
6. Lester Stoefen (15).
7. Gregory Mangin (11).
8. Keith Gledhill (8).
9. John Van Ryn (4).
10. David Jones (18).

John Hope Doeg, 1930 champion and in the 1931 first ten, was not ranked for 1932. Berkeley Bell was dropped from No. 10 to eighteenth place.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, national champion and ranked No. 1 for the seventh time last year, was not ranked "because of insufficient data," as was the case two years ago. Mrs. Moody did most of her playing last year on foreign courts, where she was unbeaten. It is a long-established policy of the U. S. L. T. A. that foreign play shall not be taken into consideration in national rankings.

Mrs. L. A. Harper was ranked No. 2 among the women, with third place going to the sensational little Californian, Carolin Babcock, a finalist against Miss Jacobs in the nationals and a graduate only last year of the juniors. Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter was ranked fourth.

Among last year's first ten who dropped down in the ranking this year were Mrs. Marion Z. Jessup, unranked; Mrs. Mary Greef Harris dropped to No. 11; Sarah Palfrey, demoted to twelfth place, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus Burke, dropped from tenth to thirteenth.

SOMERVILLE TO PLAY.

London, Ont., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Ross (Sandy) Somerville, of London, Ont., United States amateur golf champion, announced tonight he would compete in the British amateur at Hoylake, June 19-23.

Runyon Tied With Wood At Agua

2 Eastern Golf Pros Forge Ahead When Mangrum Cracks.

Diegel Stroke Behind; Wood Scores 71 by Clever Putting.

By WILLIAM WARNE.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., gave young Ray Mangrum, of Waco, Tex., a golfing lesson today, with the result that Wood joined the top flight, tying with Paul Runyon at 217 to lead the field with one round left to play in the $7,500 Agua Caliente open.

Mangrum, who held a two-stroke lead at the half-way mark, virtually was eliminated from consideration, with a 221 total.

Wood was on top of his game, to shoot a 71, but it was his uncanny putting which broke the heart of the young Texan and threw him so badly off his game that he took 80 strokes to negotiate the long 18-hole course, where he clipped three from par for a 69 on the first day and played an even 72 yesterday.

Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente professional, and John Perelli, a young pro from Beverly Hills, Calif., clubbed their way to second place in the standings, with totals of 218. Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., and Al Espinosa, of Akron, Ohio, had 219 for the third bracket.

Threesome Provides Drama.

Most of the drama of the day was found in the play of the threesome composed of Wood, Mangrum and Horton Smith.

Mangrum had led the pack two days, and went into the third round with a total of 141, five strokes ahead of Wood and six ahead of Smith.

Wood got a birdie four on the first hole, played the second and third in par, took birdie threes on the fourth and fifth, and played the sixth, seventh and eighth in par. When he sank his 20-foot putt on the eighth he was all even with Mangrum, who had played the first three holes in par, and had checked on the fourth and again on the eighth.

The play on the fifth green was the turning point. Wood just barely reached the apron with his second shot. Mangrum banged his second to within 5 feet of the cup. A birdie for him and a par for Craig would have made the Texan hard to catch. Wood sank his putt. It was more than 30 feet. Mangrum stepped up to his ball, spent several minutes considering his lie, and missed by 3 inches.

Mangrum regained the lead on the ninth, when Wood went 1 over par as a result of missing a 6-foot putt, and on the tenth it appeared that the strain was beginning to show on Wood as well. He hooked his drive into a trap and his recovery shot was not good. The blond giant ordinarily has no nerves, but when the ball wobbled out of the trap, he threw down his club and walked off without it.

Mangrum Goes Wild.

Wood sank a good putt and was 1 over par on the 4-par hole. Mangrum could not take advantage of his opportunity and also took a 5. From there on Mangrum was wild, and he finished the nine in 42 for an eighteen-hole score of 80. Smith regained the six strokes which he was down to Mangrum and two more as well.

Runyon, the young professional from White Plains, N. Y., played spotted golf. He made three birdies and took five bogies for a total of 74.

The shaky play of the youngsters who had been the pace setters, and consistently good golf by the veterans, who had been lagging several strokes behind, served to tighten up the field. The stage was set for a free-for-all scramble tomorrow for the $1,500 first prize money. Sixteen players were within five strokes of the leaders.

The best scores made today were a pair of 70s, one by MacDonald Smith, the Caroustie Scot, and the other by Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur. Dawson's score gave him a 54-hole total of 221, a three-stroke advantage over Neil White, of Los Angeles, amateur champion, who stood second among the simon-pures.

Olin Dutra, the R. G. A. champion, could do no better than 75 today, for a three-day total of 222.

Japanese 'Doped' Olympic Swimming Team, Is Charge

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Assertions that Japanese swimmers in the 1932 Olympic games were administered "oxygen or some stimulant" were under investigation today as a subcommittee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association swimming committee prepared to report at the association's next meeting on such alleged "doping."

Matt Mann, coach of the University of Michigan, N. C. A. A. championship swimming team, and Robert Kiphurth, of Yale, coach of the United States Olympic swimming team, are acting as a subcommittee of the N. C. A. A. swimming committee to report on administration of stimulants at the meeting March 24 and 25 at New Haven, Conn.

It was Mann who announced the "war against doping" of amateur swimmers, "such as was done by the Japanese in the 1933 Olympic games." He said it had been established that "oxygen or some stimulant" was administered to the Japanese team members within ten minutes of the time they took to the water for the finals at Los Angeles, in which they won five of the six races.

University of Michigan medical men cast doubt on the oxygen theory. Dr. Frank Lynan, athletic department physician, said the physical effect would last "only for a breath or two, if at all." Dr. Louis H. Newburgh, professor of clinical investigation in internal medicine,

MARYLAND U. NOSED OUT ON FOUL

Free Toss After Final Whistle Wins for V. M. I., 30-29

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 13.—Bill Rafferty's V. M. I. quint led by the brilliant shooting of Bill Downey and Charlie Millar and featured by the long shots and close guarding of both sides, knocked the University of Maryland quintet off the top perch of the Southern Conference basket ball ladder here tonight by the score of 30 to 29 as Charlie Hancock sank a foul goal after the game was over.

The foul was committed by a Maryland guard just as the whistle blew and Hancock made his chance good. Charlie Millar sank a long shot from the side of the floor near the middle of the court just 20 seconds before the whistle blew to tie the score.

Score Is Always Close.

The game started fast and V. M. I. took the lead as Downey scored only to lose it as Chase and Vincent scored for Maryland. The lead jockeyed back and forth for the first ten minutes. At that time, Maryland had a one-point lead, in the next ten minutes only one point was scored by both sides, that being a foul goal by Buscher, who was high point man for Maryland.

Vincent opened the second half with a goal from the floor and Downey tied the score with two long shots. Vincent scored again and Millar tied it up for V. M. I. Hancock's foul put V. M. I. in the lead, 18 to 17. Four field goals by each side kept V. M. I. one point in the lead. Walker put Maryland one point in the lead with three minutes to play. Millar tied the score with a foul, and Snyder scored for Maryland and Millar for V. M. I. as the game ended with a foul called on a Maryland player as a result of which Hancock sank the deciding point. The game was one of the most sensational ever played on the V. M. I. floor. It was the third straight win for the Cadets.

Babe Didrikson Stars In Professional Debut

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Mildred Babe Didrikson made her pro debut in New York tonight and led the Brooklyn Yankees' girls basket ball team to a 19-16 victory over the Long Island Ducklings.

The Babe, a rough and aggressive player, tossed in four field goals and one foul for a total of nine points and took high-scoring honors for her team. One of her field goals was from beyond mid-court and another was an overhand toss from side-court which drew applause from the crowd.

Philadelphia Gets Army-Navy Game

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The 1933 Army-Navy football game will be played on Franklin Field, University of Pennsylvania, November 25, Maj. Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, announced today.

Selection of Philadelphia for the second straight year, under the new agreement between the two academies, ended the prospect the service gridiron battle would go to Chicago as a feature of the World's Fair. This suggestion had been considered by officials of Annapolis and West Point.

It was Army's turn to name the site, under the alternating arrangement, and Maj. Gen. W. D. Connor, West Point's superintendent, authorized the athletic office to accept the invitation received from Pennsylvania. Maj. Fleming pointed out both academies were highly pleased with the conduct of the 1932 game at Franklin Field and the facilities provided.

Miller Gains Title, Wins From Paul

Chicago Stadium, Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Freddie Miller, 21-year-old southpaw of Cincinnati, is the new featherweight champion of the National Boxing Association.

Miller won the title tonight by defeating Tommy Paul, Buffalo, N. Y., title holder, in Paul's first defense of the crown he won in an elimination tournament a year ago. The verdict of the two judges and Referee Tommy Thomas was unanimous and, although close, was popular with the slim crowd of 5,000 spectators.

The combined problem of Friday the 13th and fighting a left-hander for the tikle was entirely too much for Paul. After an impressive start, in which he whaled Miller all around the ring for three rounds, and climaxed his assault by knocking him spinning into the ropes in the third, Paul began to lose ground rapidly.

G. U. TOSSERS BEATEN AT BROOKLYN

Hilltoppers Bow to Knights of Columbus, 27 to 22.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Georgetown University's basket ball team lost a close game here tonight to the local Knights of Columbus five by a margin of 27-22. The Caseys had the advantage in everything except foul shooting, outscoring the Hilltop five from scrimmage by a margin of ten baskets to six. Georgetown made good on ten foul shots to seven recorded by the host five.

The result marked the fourth straight time that the Knights of Columbus club has turned back the invaders from the Nation's Capital.

3,000 Watch Shore Star In Victory

Tech, Ahead at Start, Trails, 29-16, at Intermission.

Near Riot in Stands; Eastern Beats Western, 44 to 25.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

WITH all the glamor and palpitating thrills that were part and parcel of games played in that bygone era referred to as the "good old days," Central's mighty men of the court yesterday defeated Tech, 41-36, before a maniacal crowd of 3,000 fans, in a high school series contest. The victory gave Central undisputed possession of the leadership, and later in the afternoon Eastern went into second place on the strength of a 44-25 decision over Western.

Blows were passed between players, a near-riot broke out in one section of the stands, and some very intensive razzing, all reminiscent of the knock 'em down and drag 'em out age, enlivened the proceedings. "Little Knocky" Thomas fouled Bill Burke in the heat of battle and Burke gave the Tech player a healthy boot in the breeches. Thomas uncorked a haymaker in the general direction of Burke's chin, that missed by inches, before Waverly Wheeler, Tech captain, interjected his person between the two.

Players Let Off With Personal Fouls.

So quick were their actions the incident passed without undue excitement, and the officials permitted both players to continue in the game after attaching personal fouls. The melee among some overwrought partisans, who were old enough to know better, involved some half dozen persons and threatened to develop into sizable proportions before being squelched.

Eastern's defeat of Western was flatter than a house detective's left foot in comparison to the first game, although both teams exhibited a fair brand of basket ball and made some pretty shots.

Carroll Shore, who only a few years ago, while at Tech, was hailed as the boy wonder of the court, opened the door to a Central triumph. It was Shore's two baskets and foul shot that tied the score and then put his team ahead, 11 to 8, as the first half ran out. He scored another field goal and another foul to put the Blue out in front for keeps. Tech never regained the lost ground.

PARKE PILOTS BILL ORANGE HOME FIRST AT JEFFERSON PARK

Head Victory Recorded in Feature

Jack Biener, Second, Beats Dr. Parrish by Six Lengths.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A strong sun came out after the first race here today and by the time the featured fifth event was due the going had changed from heavy to slow. Monte Parke, local apprentice sensation, who rode the last four winners yesterday and two seconds in two previous mounts today, gave E. E. Major's Bill Orange a powerful ride to take the purse by a head. Jack Biener had no trouble annexing the place by six lengths from the favorite, Dr. Parrish.

Bill Orange, paying $7.60, completed the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:48 4-5. There was considerable rough riding in the race. Tennywood was knocked back at the half-mile pole, bled slightly and was pulled up.

The leaders ran fairly well bunched most of the way, but Bill Orange shot out of the pack at the far turn during the siege of jamming and responded gamely to Parke's strong urging the remainder of the way, with Jack Biener fighting it out courageously to the final stages. Dr. Parrish was outrun and could not menace the first two.

Jeby Knocks Out Battaglia in 12th

New York, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Benjamin Jebaltosky, known to his business as Ben Jeby, established himself in the eyes of New York State Boxing Commission as middleweight champion of the world tonight when he scored a technical knockout over Frankie Battaglia, of Winnipeg, in the twelfth round of a scheduled 15-rounder in Madison Square Garden.

The end came after 1 minute and 46 seconds of the twelfth round when Referee Jack Britton stepped between the two men to save Battaglia from needless punishment. When the old welterweight champion waived Jeby to his corner Battaglia, his right eye closed completely, and with blood pouring from nose and mouth, stood in the center of the ring until his handlers arrived to lead him to his corner.

LONDOS DRAWS 10,000.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Jim Londos, claimant to the world's wrestling championship, defeated Ernie Dusek, of Omaha, in 49 minutes and 48 seconds tonight with a body slam, followed by a body press.

The match attracted a crowd estimated by arena officials at 10,000.

PRINTERS FORFEIT.

Bureau of Investigation strengthened its hold on first place in the Government League last night when it received a forfeit from the Union Printers, who failed to place a team on the floor for their scheduled game.

Abie Coleman has had some impressive early morning trials and after working a quarter in 0:22 is Post Mortem's selection . . . Earl Clark, Braves outfielder, is more proud of his 100-yard dash record in the District playground meet several years ago than he is of his National League record of 13 putouts in one game in the outfield in 1929 . . . Ralph Bennie, star of Eagles basket ball team, recently quit the milk route he worked for ten years . . . Jim Pixlee, G. Gallaudet Beaten By Generals, 43-18

Blues Are Outclassed After Good Showing at Start; Antilla Leader.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 13.—Washington and Lee's court men opened their week-end stand at home by defeating Gallaudet College here tonight, 43 to 18. After getting off to a poor start in the early part of the game, by allowing the visitors to hold them to one basket, the half ended, 16 to 8, in favor of the Generals.

Antilla, with two baskets and two out of two fouls, led the visitors.

The game proved to be little more than a practice tilt for the Generals, who will oppose University of Maryland cage team tomorrow night. In order to end the week on the win side of the column, the Generals will have to take the Old Liners tomorrow night, since they lost a close battle to the V. P. I. Gobblers earlier in the week.

Two Mat Favorites Return Thursday

Garibaldi Faces Coleman in Feature; Wilson to Meet Daviscourt.

Two rasslers who gained themselves vast followings here in the past will return to the scene of their former conquests next Thursday night at the Washington Auditorium. They are Dr. Ralph Wilson, handsome young graduate dentist from the Universities of Indiana and Pennsylvania, and Gino Garibaldi.

Garibaldi occupies the feature spot on the card, where he will meet little Abe Coleman, the 5-foot muscular giant, one of whose favorite "holts" is leaping high in the air in front of an opponent, twisting horizontal and kicking with both heels for his rival's chin.

Dr. Wilson will be boosted right back on the pinnacle of popularity, for he meets Dick Daviscourt in a 45-minute bout.

Roosevelt High's Five Downs Alexandrians

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 13.—Roosevelt High School defeated Alexandria High School, 35-28, in a well played game before a large crowd here tonight. With Joe Sherman cast in the star role, the Rough Riders ran up a comfortable lead in the first half, which ended 18-7 in their favor.

Alexandria overhauled the District quintet in the third period, but Sherman put the visitors ahead for the last time with a pair of pot shots. Hayman's clever guarding helped repulse a last-minute Alexandria rally.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, JANUARY 13.

Well, friend, I squeezed past Friday, the 13th, without being shutout and when I say squeezed, I mean squeezed. After watching my picks run in and out of the money for six races, Wood River, at a $16 mutuel, popped up in the seventh to save the day. With an uncertain track tomorrow we can look for upsets and good prices. I have tried my best to locate both. If the substitute race is used tomorrow, don't overlook the old Bennings standby—I mean Drombo.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—PORTAM gets the track he likes again tomorrow and should add another set of brackets. RIFF RAFF, with top weight, figures to give the top one a battle, especially if he escapes interference at the first turn. RAFFLER CON for the show.

SECOND RACE—COUSIN JUDY, scratched today, may provide an upset in this. This stable is anxious to put this one over and it looks like the spot. DONNY JOHNNY must move out of the also eligibles to get a chance and is dangerous if he starts. HAPPY WARRIOR should take care of the others.

THIRD RACE—JUSTINA is down the list and may be forced out but can toss a mean hoof in the going and will be a mighty tough one if allowed to parade to the barrier. ZEKIEL appears to be the one to beat. THE FRENCH ROSE gets in lightly and will be ready if the top pair make any mistakes.

FOURTH RACE—HARUM SCARUM needs a mile and a half and a heavy track to show to best advantage. The distance is right and the track hardly will be better than slow. BUCK HERO and BOUNDING DEEP to hold the others safe.

FIFTH RACE—REGAL FLAG is on the improve and gets a break in the weights from the other contenders. Might be a good mutuel. WHIPPERCRACKER and SANDWRACK to fill out the money picture.

SIXTH RACE—BONNIE CAP is a consistent youngster and goes here with only 103 pounds. CICERO to do the principal chasing. SLAPSTICK might take the show award.

SEVENTH RACE—VIMONT, which has burned up as much money as any horse in the country, may provide the victory in this. HAL RILEY and PEACE LADY for the rest.

THE POST'S CONSENSUS AT JEFFERSON PARK

COLLEGE CUT NOT TO BE GENERAL

Economy, But No Curtailment Rule, A. P. Survey Shows.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Rallying from the loss of the Poughkeepsie regatta, first of the Nation's great intercollegiate sports extravaganzas to go down before the sustained drive of depression, Eastern colleges threw up a determined and almost united defense today around the remainder of their annual athletic fixtures.

A survey of Eastern schools by the Associated Press shows only the Eastern Intercolelgiate Baseball League tottering in the wake of the annual 38-year-old regatta, due chiefly to Cornell's recent decision to abandon all but basket ball during the remainder of the school year.

Everywhere else, although rigid economy is in evidence on all sides, the second-line trenches, with a few minor exceptions, will be maintained.

Probably the most courageous display is that of Franklin and Marshall where the boys are taking on baseball for the first time.

The surveya clearly reveal that schools in or close to the centers of population are standing the strain better than others farther away from the immediate reach of the sports public.

"Economy, but no curtailment" is the general slogan at Columbia, Temple, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Yale, Dartmouth, Harvard and other New England colleges.

Cornell and Syracuse head the list of schools hardest hit by dwindling receipts.

No decision on the fate of the baseball league, including Yale, Columbia, Dartmouth, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Cornell, is expected for some weeks.

Hitting the Headpin

OCCIDENTAL took all three games from Hyattsville in their District League match rolled on the suburban team's alleys last night. Occidental rolled games of 640, 637 and 585, with Astor Clarke turning in high game of 158 and high set, 405. Hyattsville's games were 584, 602 and 520. Tony Santini's 132 game and Perce Wolfe's 376 set were best.

Meter Shop rolled 553 and 1,564 to snag team honors in the Washington Gas Light Co. loop at Convention Hall. Corcoran's 158 game and Jones' 363 set were high.

King Pin dumped the leading Convention Hall team in the District League at King Pin. The losers rolled their lowest game of the year, 503. Bill Miller's 359 was high in the match, a poor exhibition at best.

Bill Ciampitt saved Petworth from a whitewash at the hand of Lucky Strike in the National Capital League at the Strike with a spare in the ninth box of his final game. He struck the tenth and got a 10-pin count for a team score 609. Earl McPhilomy almost tied the score when he spared in his final box and counted eight pins.

Johnny Welsh's 131 and 349 featured Farnam's 2-1 win over Rinaldi Tailors in the National Capital loop at Lucky Strike.

A three-game sweepstakes for women will be rolled tonight at 8 o'clock at the Arcadia alleys. The entrance fee of $1.60 includes the cost of games. A sufficient number of entries will guarantee the winner a paid entrance in the Women's Dixie Sweepstakes.

A similar stake for men will be rolled Tuesday night at the same alleys, on the time will be 10:30 o'clock and the entrance fee, $2.60.

Mike Vitale rolled a 164 game, a new high mark for the season, and Mac Garilli a 381 to lead the Building Contractors loop at Arcadia. The A. W. Lee team mauled the maples for a 594 game and 1,688 set.

B. Boss garnered individual honors in the I. C. C. League at Arcadia with his 133 and 358. His team, Mails and Piles, led the others with 586 and 1,654.

R. H. Winn's scores of 118 and 335 topped the Federal Trade Commission League at Arcadia. Orioles had a 510 game and 1,454.

said "the only effect of oxygen toward greater speed or endurance would be in the minds of the athletes." He added that such an administration "might harm the athlete."

Manr said Western Conference swimming coaches already have ruled out administration of oxygen and that a similar rule will be sought by the N. C. A. A. "to forestall the danger of the practice spreading in this country." He said the practice is "unethical, regardless of harmful effects."

COLLEGIANS IN 2 EVENTS TONIGHT

G. W. Mermen Hosts to Rider; C. U. Frosh Five in Action.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S freshman basket ball team and George Washington University's swimming team hold the center of the college sportlight tonight, the Cardinal Freshies meeting Samuel Johnson Prep, of Stratford, Conn., at 7:30 o'clock tonight at C. U. gymnasium and the Colonial swimming against Rider College at the Ambassador pool at 8 o'clock.

The Connecticut team, which meets C. U.'s cubs, is rated one of the best young teams in its New England sector. Colby, Bagley, Wargo and Ferris are the aces of the team, but will have their hands full tonight in dealing with the local team, which is dominated by Bernie Lieb, last year's all-high center while playing with Eastern. Other C. U. regulars are Frank McGann and Reds Morrissey, forwards, and Tom Gascarine and Pick Kahanec, guards.

Count on Vartia and McMullan.

G. W. hopes to unveil a couple more swimming stars today, to aid Capt. Max Rote, in Carl Vartia, whose times for the 440 have been extremely satisfactory all week and Charlie McMullen, whose improvement in the 150-yard backstroke has been marked.

Georgetown's freshman basketers meet Devitt Prep this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Hilltop. The game will bristle with former high and prep school players, Georgetown having Gregg and Lao, formerly of Gonzaga; Leon Esenstad, formerly of Business; Jacobs, formerly of Western; Nurre, formerly of Georgetown Prep, and Johnny Breen, who played with St. John's prep school champions last year. Devitt is dominated by Anthony Latona, former Western crack, and has Paul Clements and Bill O'Hara from last year's Devitt team.

On the road tonight Maryland will meet Washington and Lee, Gallaudet will take on V. M. I., Catholic University tangles with St. Joseph's in Philadelphia, and George Washington plays Loyola, at Baltimore, in a game that will test the lofty Colonials to the limit.

RUNS-HITS and ERRORS

By BOB CONSIDINE

WASHINGTON was one of the first teams to give up profanity, the first step that was taken to make the boys more gentlemanly in their chosen pursuit in life. When Clark Griffith came here 20 years ago one could always drop out to the ball yard of an afternoon in search of some new and vitriolic swear word, some new profane catchphrase or Rabalaisian snort that would singe the grass.

Well it got to be so bad that something had to be done about, particularly in Washington, where there was more than an even chance that the diplomatic nephew of the Emperor of Japan might be in the stands. And so Washington took the lead—the initial move in making the game safe for kiddies to watch.

Outstanding big league swearers of all time were Fred Clark, old Pirate outfielder, and Reds Donoghue, pitcher in the old days for Boston, Detroit and St. Louis. Donoghue reached his peak as a vituperist when Jim McAleer, testy manager of Boston at the time, fined Donoghue $100 a bottle for the beer he drank the night before a big game.

One uncooperative player on a ball team has about the same effect as one bad apple in a barrel, or one pair of brass knuckles in a Dublin election. Lack of team spirit is about the only unpardonable thing in baseball, unless it is doubting the integrity of Judge Landis.

It is harder for a baseball player to show lack of team spirit than it is for a college football player, for instance: The football player's actions can be seen immediately if, to use an example, he fails to block or tackle with old-time ferocity. In baseball it is more subtle. A fellow starts to stamp himself as uncooperative when he is unconcerned with the position of the team in the league; when he's content to keep his batting average above .300, and in general doesn't care much whether school keeps or not.

Big league owners get all hot and bothered about uncooperative players. They rant about "fighting heart" and "sportsmanship" and such high-sounding phrases, and in the back of their minds are probably thinking of the dear old business office.

Joe Cronin will go directly from San Francisco to Biloxi, instead of coming here to bat the ball with Clark Griffith. Joe willl arrive February 22.

Larry Flynn, who batted .600 and something two years ago in the high school baseball series, while playing center field for Business, will hitchhike down to Biloxi and take a chance of being "picked up" by Griffith and perhaps sent to Chattanooga or Youngstown.

Joe Mitchell, who sees about as much sandlot baseball as is played around Washington, pronounces Flynn the most natural baserunner developed on the local lots in ten years.

Last year Flynn attached himself to the local team and shagged fungoes, and although Walter Johnson was pleased enough with the way he handled himself, he could never convince the head man.

Washington-Lee High Bows to G. W. Frosh

The George Washington Freshmen entertained the Washington-Lee High School five yesterday and won a 40-to-15 basket ball game. Barney Kane, former Eastern High star, led the winners with 14 points. Good scored three field goals for the Virginians.

Landon Prep Tossers Nose Out Baltimoreans

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 13.—Landon Prep of Washington defeated Donaldson School in an exciting game here this afternoon by a score of 29-24. The winning team rolled up a comfortable lead in the first half of the fray which stood it in good stead when Donaldson spurted in the closing minutes of the game. Becker, center, was outstanding for Landon, while Steffic and Davis were best for the home team.

Stocks Seek Lower Ground In Dull, Irregular Trading

One-Tenth Decline Marks Cut in Turnover to 833,915 Shares.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The stock market was dull and irregular today. By closing time the tone was fairly steady, due to some late short coverings, but over the five hours the market made little pretense of plotting out a definite course.

Professionals seemed to be providing a large percentage of the purchases and sales.

Tobacco stocks had a mild spurt. Speculative nervousness so evident not long ago when wholesale prices were cut was doubtless overcome by the favorable financial report recently published by one company and also by anticipation of dividend meetings soon to be held in this group. Whether usual extras will be ordered on the strength of what appears to have been a favorable year for the tobacco people is current grist for the gossip mills; many of today's buyers doubtless look for such disbursements. American Tobacco "B," Liggett & Myers "B" and R. J. Reynolds "B" were up a point or two.

Procter & Gamble got back on its feet after Thursday's sell-off, but the McCrory issues still drooped. Homestake Mining, favored when commodities are declining, flopped a few points, perhaps because some holders associated farm relief with eventually higher staple prices. Loew's and Drug, Inc., were rather soft, the latter reflecting the complications which have arisen over its sale of a British subsidiary.

Generally, leaders backed and filled irresolutely. Rails were a trifle easy, but a number of industrials closed firmly. United States Steel was unchanged, while American Can, National Biscuit, Case, Union Carbide, General Electric and Standard Oil of New Jersey were up a little. American Telephone, off a point at the lowest, made virtually full recovery. Volume slipped down to 833,915 shares.

Wall street had anticipated passage of the farm allotment bill by the House, but was inclined to await the measure's future fortunes before demonstrating opinions thereon or attempting to appraise possible results.

New Orders for Shoes Mount to $4,000,000

Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Orders totaling $4,000,000 have been signed with shoe manufacturers by members of the National Shoe Retailers Association, ending their twenty-second convention, Jesse Adler, of New York City, said today.

Mr. Adler, a director of the association, said the shoe business outlook was brighter than at the start of any year since 1930. A. H. Geutting, of Philadelphia, was reelected president. M. A. Mittelman, Detroit, was elected first vice president, and Harry E. Fontius, Denver, second vice president.

DuPont Offices Deny Eastman Kodak Plans

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Published reports that the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. was seeking control of the Eastman Kodak Co. were denied today at the Wilmington (Del.) headquarters of Du Pont Co. and at the Rochester (N. Y.) office of the Eastman Co.

What the Stock Market Did

	Fri.	Thur.
Advances	134	155
Declines	280	308

Stocks.

Dull, irregular dealing resulted in an average loss of one-tenth. The closing tone was fairly steady. Sales volume fell to 833,915 shares.

Bonds.

Prices dropped three-tenths of a point as traders made a rush for profits. The turnover declined to $12,266,000. Best-grade securities resisted losses.

Curb.

The market sagged after feeble efforts to rally. Bright spots were provided by Commonwealth Edison issues with a gain of 2 points. Sales volume dropped to 100,000 shares.

Wheat.

Unloading of future deliveries sent prices lower. Action on the allotment bill was blamed for loss of confidence. May wheat sold at 48¼ to 48⅜ cents.

Cotton.

Trading moved within narrow limits, and the general market closed 1 to 4 points lower. March sold at 6.16. Liverpool reported prices steady on Bombay buying.

BONDS SINK LOWER ON PROFITS DRIVES

Three-Tenths Loss Recorded as Sales Dwindle to $12,266,000.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The bond market suffered a slight relapse today as traders cashed in some of the sizable profits they had been piling up over the past several weeks.

Best grade corporation investment securities generally withstood the realizing assaults and held to a fractional range throughout. United States Government and most foreign issues, however, joined the secondary groups in a retreat.

A last-minute rally pared the majority of losses and even enabled a number of earlier victims to close a trifle higher.

Sales Volume Less.

The volume of transactions diminished considerably from yesterday's aggregate, sales totaling $12,266,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds gave up three-tenths of a point. This was the second mild reaction since December 27.

There was little or no change in market conditions. Government issues, for some time around the highest levels of a year or more, receded following announcement that the Federal Reserve System had permitted some $38,000,000 of its Federal holdings to mature.

Incoming gold and money from circulation, nevertheless, caused the system's excess reserves to show a substantial gain. On the other hand, the long-term list probably was influenced by uncertainties regarding the Treasury's spring refinancing operations.

Active Rail Losers.

The most active rail losers of fractions to around a point included loans of Santa Fe, Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, New York Central and Southern Pacific. Union Pacific first 4s were heavily traded for a small gain and some liens of Erie, Great Northern, Canadian Pacific and Chesapeake Corporation rallied moderately.

McCrory Stores 5½s slumped 19 points in addition to their yesterday's decline and issues of United Drug, U. S. Rubber, Murray Body, Bush Terminal Building, Loew's and Western Union were heavy.

German obligations declined 1 to 4 or more points and losses nearly as great were recorded by some loans of Norway, Rio Grande do Sul, Chile and Colombia. British 5½s firmed and French 7½s eased.

Steel Plants Threaten Move From East in Freight Row

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Pittsburgh and Youngstown Steel Companies threatened the rail carriers today with "immediate relocation of their plants to the Detroit area unless relief in freight rates is granted.

"We can not permanently pay $5.70 a ton to deliver steel into Detroit," J. A. Coakley, general traffic manager of United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries, told representatives of three freight associations at a public hearing today.

More than 125, including 40 railroad executives, attended.

"I will say frankly, unless our demands for reductions to compete with water rates to the automobile district are granted we are prepared to change our factories to the source of the demand," Coakley said. "We have seen too many steel concerns 'go west' because they did not meet existing conditions not to realize the danger to us."

The Central, Trunk Line and New England Freight Associations were represented by their respective chairmen, Eugene Morris, H. Wilson and F. Van Ummersen.

The petition of the United States Steel companies, which was supported by independents of the Youngstown, Ohio, and Pittsburgh areas, demanded reductions ranging from 4 cents to as high as 15½ cents per hundred pounds.

The proposed changes were from Pittsburgh and Youngstown to Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland.

The question of truck competition bobbed up several times during the talk, and H. D. Rhodehouse, of Republic Steel, Youngstown, Ohio, said, in summing up the general impression:

"The 600,000 tons of steel a day now handled by the trucks can easily multiply itself and eventually ruin the carriers."

Steel men said they considered the carriers' attitude as "very friendly" toward the application. If the reductions are granted, they predicted a general rescaling of railroad freight rates to meet competitive transportation conditions in other sections of the Middle West.

Labor Conference Studies Hours Cut

Leader at Geneva Regrets U. S. Attitude as Crisis Presses.

Geneva, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Debate on establishment of a 40-hour working week without reduction of wages continued today at the International Labor Conference.

Arthur Hayday, representing British workers, declared employers must share in the sacrifice necessitated by the present crisis and accept a reduction in hours without a cut in pay. He expressed regret that the United States is not participating officially in the meeting.

"America's attitude and opinions are of tremendous importance to the world," he said, "a brave can not beat a squaw on the banks of the Mississippi without the whole world feeling the effects."

Sterling Fluctuates Widely on Market

Cables Close at $3.35 1-2; French Franc Sags Under Gold Point.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Wide fluctuations in the British pound sterling were the features of the foreign exchange market today.

While the pound lost more than a cent in London before the local market opened, it was only moderately off here, and managed to close unchanged at $3.35½ for cables.

There was little support for the French franc, which sagged ⅛ of a point to a cable rate of 3.90¼ cents, just under the gold import point. An easier tone was shown by Belgian belgas, German marks, Dutch guilders, Canadian dollars, Shanghai taels and Mexican pesos. Japanese yen and Spanish pesetas firmed fractionally.

CURB MARKET SAGS AFTER RALLY FAILS

Utility Issues Up 2 Points as Sales Decline to 100,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The curb market today marked time and after several feeble efforts to rally eased slightly toward the close. Transfers totaled 100,000 shares against 120,000 yesterday.

Commonwealth Edison furnished a bright spot among the utilities, gaining more than 2 points in moderate turnover. There was no particular news to account for the gain, which apparently was due in part to short covering. Electric Bond & Share, Niagara Hudson Power and American Superpower lost scant fractions, while American Gas & Electric and Cities Service were steady.

Great Atlantic & Pacific made public a sales estimate for the five weeks ended December 31 at $79,615,596 against $91,309,637 in the same 1931 period. The stock was steady.

Deere, Cord, Stutz, Woolworth, Ltd., and the Ford issues were unchanged to a shade lower. Gulf lost a small fraction in the oil group, while Humble and Standard of Indiana were steady. The Curb Exchange was notified that the Knox Hat Co. had changed its name to the Bryndun Corporation. There were no sales in the stock.

Dollar Stages New High As France Ships Gold

Paris, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The dollar today reached a new high for recent weeks, closing at 25.63. Bankers said that the price was raised because of the expense of handling gold shipments to New York, where it was found that it lost weight slightly in melting.

The gold export rate now is estimated at around 25.635. (The gold export rate is nominally 25.625.) One hundred and twenty-one boxes of gold valued at 76,350,600 francs were shipped today to America on the Manhattan.

WHEAT VALUES DROP ON FUTURES SALES

Allotment Bill Is Blamed in Slump; Corn and Oats Decline.

Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Unloading of recently acquired holdings of future deliveries did much to give the wheat market a setback of about a cent a bushel today.

Trade comment indicated House adoption of the agricultural allotment bill had failed to stimulate wheat buying, and instead had disturbed confidence of many speculative owners. A restraint on selling, however, was numerous expressions of belief that the allotment bill would never become a law.

Wheat closed nervous, ⅜ to 1 under yesterday's finish; corn, ¼ to ½ down; oats, ⅛ to ¼ off and provisions unchanged to 20 cents decline.

Legislation Is Influence.

From start to finish, the attention of wheat traders converged on problematic effects of agricultural allotment legislation. One of the largest grain houses here, Bartlett-Frazier & Co., issued a statement saying the immediate effect of the House bill, should it become a law, might be favorable to some advance in prices, but once in operation it would result in complete disaster to the commodities markets, with a further slump in world prices. Adding some momentum to the general downward trend of the Chicago market was weakness of wheat values at Kansas City, coupled with delivery of 100,000 bushels today on January wheat contracts there.

Wheat price rallies in Chicago lacked force and at no time lifted the market more than a small fraction above yesterday's close. Increased pressure of wheat abroad by leading export nations was an apparent handicap to bulls. Shippers' offerings overseas were reported as urgent from Canada, Argentina and Australia, with demand slow and prices lower. On the other hand, United States Southwest sections were persistently without moisture, and steady deterioration of winter wheat was reported.

Corn and oats averaged lower, influenced by a moderate increase of country offerings of corn.

COTTON PRICES CUT IN NARROW TRADING

March Closes at 6.16 as General Market Drops 1 to 4 Points.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Cotton prices continued to move within narrow limits today, closing slightly lower. March contracts, after selling at 6.26 early, declined to 6.15 and closed at 6.16, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 1 to 4 points.

The opening was 5 to 7 points higher in response to Liverpool cables and continued demand from foreign and domestic trade sources. Houses with continental connections were among the buyers. There also was some selling attributed to Liverpool and brokers with Japanese connections. The South also had a few selling orders here.

There was sufficient buying to give the market a fairly steady tone around midday, but later offerings increased with prices declining some 10 to 12 points from the best of the day. Trade interests continued buying on the decline, but were said to be operating on scale-down orders. July contracts, which had sold up to 6.50 early, closed at 6.42.

Farm Relief Bill.

Passage of the farm relief bill by the House had no positive effect on the market, although a disposition to await developments with reference to its effects or its further progress may have led to some evening up of accounts.

It was pointed out by some traders that at the advance of Wednesday afternoon which carried March contracts up to 6.43, the market showed a gain of about 90 points as compared with the low levels of last month, and part of the day's selling was supposed to have reflected an easier technical position.

Liverpool cables reported a quiet market with prices steady on a little Bombay buying. Exports today 46,401. Making 4,552,432 so far this season. Port receipts 48,246. U. S. port stocks, 4,774,460.

2 Bond Groups Enter Frisco Receiver Fight

St. Louis, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Two new groups of bondholders this week entered the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. receivership contest. One group is headed by Andrew E. Mellon, of New York, as chairman, and the amount of its holdings is not shown in the petition for leave to intervene in the suit of Dora and Charles Gans, New York, which was the original receivership petition.

The other group of bondholders, with holdings stated as amounting to $100,000, consists of Alfred Pollak and 13 others. The Gans plaintiffs own $3,500 of bonds and are still contesting the action of Federal Judge C. B. Earts, who appointed receivers on a later petition of a creditor firm, after refusing to do so in the Gans suit.

Wellington, New Zealand, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The Wheat Purchase Board today estimated the New Zealand wheat crop at 10,000,000 bushels. This would provide an exportable surplus of nearly 2,500,000 bushels.

BANK CLEARINGS RISE.

Bank clearings at 47 leading cities of the United States, as reported to Bradstreet's Weekly, totaled $4,631,831,000 for the week ended January 11. This is a drop of 8.1 per cent from the preceding week for which New York City is mainly responsible. Outside the financial center, the decrease was 2.1 per cent. From the corresponding week a year ago, declines of 25 and 16.5 per cent, respectively, are shown. After adjustment for seasonal variations, the weekly clearings index compiled by Bradstreet's Weekly, dropped from 46.9 to 46.1 per cent of the 1928-1930 average. A year ago the index stood at 52.2.

The following table gives the clearings by cities, for this week and last, together with per cent changes, as compared with the same week of last year.

BUSINESS SHOWING RESISTANCE POWER

Revival of Capital Courage Is Seen in Improved Bond Buying.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The difficulty of comparison with the December holiday period tends to becloud the current business trend, but further indications are seen that trade is showing a better resistance to adverse influences than a year ago, the Weekly Mercantile Reviews said today.

Brandstreet's pointed to improvement in the bond market as a reflection of "the slow revival of capital courage," but said the increase in commercial failures last week contributed a jarring note to the symphony of convalescence.

"Even though the outlook is obscured by some uncertainties of congressional programs and international debt adjustments," says Dun's, "trade recovery during the first quarter, at least, is expected to be characterized by fewer irregularities and less frequent interruptions than marked its course during 1932.

"The most encouraging feature of the current situation is that the importance of returning to fundamentals is becoming more apparent and that the future is brighter because realities are being faced and artificial expedients are being discounted.

"Accompanied by a strong upswing in commodity prices, advancing security markets, and a wider but somewhat uneven expansion in general industry, wholesale buying assumed a quicker pace, with orders for spring merchandise reaching good levels during the week."

UNITED CORPORATION EARNS $13,824,187

Morgan - Sponsored Utility Investment Company's Income Is Less.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The United Corporation of Delaware, Morgan-sponsored utility investment company which has substantial holdings in the stocks of several leading public utility companies, today issued its annual report showing net income for 1932 of $13,824,187 against $16,445,327 in 1931.

After payment of dividends on the $3 preferred stock, this was equivalent to 44 cents a share on 14,531,197 shares of no par common stock against 75 cents a share the year before.

Its security holdings, carried at a cost or declared value of $592,821,864 on December 31, had an estimated market value of $272,256,212 at the end of 1932, or nearly $3,000,000 higher than the $269,405,996 figure reported at the end of 1931. As the company acquired its security holdings through the exchange of its own stock for the shares of companies in which it is interested, the shrinkage in valuation from 1929 peak prices did not cause any cash drain on the company. The only loan carried in its liabilities was a demand loan of $11,672,000. Capital surplus stood at $376,630,000 and earned surplus was $8,087,000.

No changes of importance were reported during the year in the company's investments. Its principal holdings were in shares of Niagara Hudson Power, Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, United Gas Improvement, Columbia Gas & Electric, Consolidated Gas of New York and Mohawk Hudson Power Corporation.

The American International Corporation, in its report for 1932, issued today, showed operating income of $21,057, compared with $168,889 for the preceding year.

During the year debentures of an aggregate face value of $6,785,000 were acquired at an average cost of $72.03, making a total in the treasury at the end of the year of $10,805,000 face value. After deducting the debentures the corporation's net assets were equivalent to $3.40 per outstanding share of common stock compared with $5.46 at the end of 1931.

As of December 31 last the value of securities owned by the corporation was $16,226,000, as compared with an original cost of $33,840,439. The corporation's surplus at the end of the year totaled $5,367,420. At the annual meeting on January 31, stockholders will vote on a proposal to reduce the amount of the capital represented by the common stock from $15,914,325 to $1,060,955, or $1 a share.

Chicago's Big Bank Makes Field Head

Continental-Illinois National Elects Him to Succeed G. M. Reynolds.

Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Stanley Field was elected chairman of the board of directors of the Continental-Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. today, succeeding George M. Reynolds. A relative newcomer in banking leadership, Mr. Field had been in virtual command of the largest bank west of New York since his election as chairman of the executive committee a year ago.

Mr. Reynolds retired January 7 after nearly a half century in the field of finance, most of it spent in building up the Continental Bank through a series of mergers.

Mr. Field is director and president of the Field Museum of Natural History, a former official of Marshall Field & Co., and only recently has become an active bank leader. In 1913 he was made a director of the Illinois Trust Co. In 1918 he was a member of the merger committee that succeeded in uniting the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, the Corn Exchange National Bank and the Merchants Loan & Trust Co. as the Illinois Merchants Trust Co.

Two St. Louis Banks Close.

St. Louis, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Two more of the smaller banks in the St. Louis district, the St. Louis National Bank, and the West St. Louis Trust Co., closed their doors today, making a total of eight closings within nine days. The St. Louis National Bank was capitalized at $200,000 and had resources of $2,128,285. The West St. Louis Trust Co. had $200,000 capital stock and $2,168,732 resources.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

CRITICS who attended the performance seemingly were unanimous in their enthusiasm over Gruenberg's "Emperor Jones," presented for the first time as a grand opera last Saturday. Having been in Haiti, having read the play and then having seen it performed, we looked forward to the operatic version of "Emperor Jones" with keen interest.

However, we were very much disappointed and tuned the performance out when it was but two-thirds finished. Regardless of the merits of the music, the appraisal of which we leave to Miss Elisabeth E. Poe, the piece, aside from its dramatic value, seemed entirely unsuitable for broadcasting.

No more "Emperor Jones" for us over the radio!

Likewise, though Wagner is one of our favorite composers, we want no more of "Siegfried" over the radio. This is one of the heaviest of the Wagnerian operas and caused a listener well versed in music to remark: "Why don't they broadcast operas which adapt themselves more readily to the radio?"

And why not? If the N.B.C., as reported, is paying $160,000 a season for the privilege of broadcasting opera, it ought to be allowed to select the operas which can be broadcast to the best advantage, especially when so many are hearing grand opera for the first time.

"LOHENGRIN," the second and third acts of which will be offered from the Metropolitan today (WRC, 3 p. m.), would seem, therefore, to offer considerably more promise to the average listener.

Artur Bodanzky will conduct and the cast will be as follows:

King Henry—Ludwig Hofmann, basso.

Lohengrin—Gustaaf De Loor, tenor.

Elsa—Elisabeth Rethberg, soprano.

Telramund—Friedrich Schorr, baritone.

Ortrud—Karin Branzell, contralto.

King's Herald—George Cehanovsky, barytone.

Claude Debussy's opera, "Pelleas et Melisande," will be heard from the Metropolitan for the first time next Saturday.

THE following letter was received in response to a criticism of the character of several of the programs designed primarily for children printed in this column recently:

"Permit me to add my third to Mr. Gillmore's second of Mr. Parker's criticism of the juvenile broadcasts.

"Mr. Parker says: 'Sonny called me yesterday to come into the parlor and stay with him as he was scared. Of course, I did so, and listened to a blood-curdling and hair-raising broadcast for a few minutes and shut the radio off.'

"Mr. Gillmore says: 'My small son has a happy common-sense turn of mind, and his own ideas of the fitness of things, and when one of these lady broadcasters starts her stuff in that high-pitched, fright ladening rasp he says, 'There is that goat-getter again,' and shunts the radio on to another station.'

"Children will learn quite soon enough of the horrors of civilization when they begin to read the newspapers. In the meantime, the radio would be better employed in seeking to aid parents in their efforts to bring up their children in the way that they should go.

"TOM MOORE."

MUCH has been made of the fact that John Masefield, poet laureate of England, once worked in a saloon. In connection with the forthcoming twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the National Press Club, Oswald F. Schuette, of the National Association of Broadcasters, told this story about the late William Howard Taft:

"In the pre-Volstead days, whenever a club secured a liquor license it was issued in the name of the president of the club. I discovered this during my term as president of the National Press Club," Mr. Schuette said.

"There was a regular form to fill out. The same blanks were used for clubs as for ordinary saloons. Imagine then my surprise in looking over some old licenses to come across one signed 'William Howard Taft, barkeeper.' On closer examination I found that it had been issued to the University Club, of which Mr. Taft was then president. He had, of course, signed it, along with other routine papers, and doubtless had a hearty laugh in doing so."

A musical interpretation of Old World legends will be heard in a new series, starting tonight, known as "The Golden Thread." Under the baton of Frank Black a 42-piece orchestra, augmented by choral groups, will present unusual and special music over WRC at 9 p. m. Accompanied by a dramatic narrative, the feature will be heard at the same hour on successive Saturdays.

The first of the half-hour radio revues with Gus Van, George Olsen and his music, with Ethel Shutta, Fran Frey and Richard Gardner as soloists, will be heard during the Oldsmobile program over WRC at 9:30 p. m. George Hicks also will be heard during the entertainment.

Albert Spalding, considered one of the greatest violinists, will be heard as soloist when the Boston Symphony concert is broadcast over the WJZ network, including WBAL, at 8:15 o'clock tonight. Richard Burgin, assistant conductor and concert master of the Boston Symphony, will direct the concert, and the program will consist of Vaughan Williams' "Pastoral Symphony," Mozart's "Concerto for Violin in D Major," "Poem for Violin and Orchestra," by Chausson, and suite from Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka."

RAY ERLANDSON, former Washingtonian, has been made sales manager of the newly created auto-radio division of the Grigsby-Grunow Co., in Chicago, manufacturers of Majestic radios. Mr. Erlandson was formerly connected with the National Education Association, but, judging from the numerous promotions he has received from the Grigsby-Grunow people, he is as successful in the business world, if not more so, as he was in the field of education.

Studio pickups: Julia Sanderson has a pair of stockings woven by her great-grandmother in 1820 . . . Entertainers on the Corn Cob Pipe Club program, which originates at Station WRVA, Richmond, Va., leave the studio after their weekly broadcast laden with fruits and vegetables, the gifts of admirers . . . Paul Whiteman's popularization of the dance tune, "When Day Is Done," earned more than $50,000 in royalties for its composer, a young Hungarian lawyer . . . Lowell Patton in seven years has set more than 200 poems to music.

Notary Will Face Grand Jury.

Judge Gus A. Schuldt, in Police Court, yesterday referred to the District grand jury the charges of falsely certifying a document that had been preferred against S. H. Blumenthal, a notary public. Police charged Blumenthal with certifying an application for an automobile title in which there was an error in the date.

FLU INFECTS HALF OF PRINCE GEORGES

Few Deaths, However, Have Been Reported to Health Officer.

Almost half the population of Prince Georges County has been affected by the epidemic of influenza, according to the December report of Dr. A. B. Hooton, county health officer. In spite of this large number of cases, few deaths have been reported, most of them due to pneumonia setting in after an attack of the flu.

"An epidemic of influenza of a moderately severe type swept over the county during the month and still continues, although greatly modified," Dr. Hooten reported. "It is difficult to estimate the number of cases, but it appears that almost half of the population was affected, although many were not attended by physicians. Much can be done to prevent the severe and often fatal complications of this disease, but once it has gained headway little can be done to check its spread. It appears, however, that many persons have escaped by avoiding crowds, coughs and sneezes. In regard to its contagious nature in its epidemic form, it heads the list of all the communicable diseases."

The population of Prince Georges is about 64,000, so the influenst victims will number more than 30,000, according to Dr. Hooton's report. The total number of cases treated by doctors has not yet been reached, as reports from physicians are still coming in. Dr. Hooton has estimated that for every case reported there are ten not treated by medical men, and on which no report is made.

The epidemic reached its climax December 19, when 49 cases were reported in one day. From that time the number steadily declined, until now reports are coming in at the rate of about 3 a day. Spread of the disease was not noticed until about the middle of December, when Dr. Hooton heard unofficially of considerably more cases than were reported to his office by doctors. He then sent out a form letter asking physicians to make sure their reports reached him, and was deluged with accounts of prevalence of the disease.

College Park Man Sues Widener in Car Crash

A suit for $5,000 for personal injuries was filed against Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia race horse owner, and his butler, William C. Turner, by Kenneth Spessard, of College Park, Md., yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

Mr. Spessard asked the sum for injuries received in an auto accident in Hyattsville last Monday. A car said to be owned by Widener and driven by Turner skidded on a wet road, the collision between it and Spessard's car following. Turner was en route to Miami to open the Widener winter home, according to Walter L. Green, attorney for Spessard. Mr. Widener was not in the car at the time.

John Patton's Will Filed for Probate

Half of Estate of Former Charlottesville Mayor Goes to Daughter.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 13.—The will of John S. Patton, former mayor and for many years librarian at the University of Virginia, has been admitted to probate in the corporation court. It disposes of an estate appraised at something over $40,000, consisting of several residences within the city limits and personal property. His daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Patton Brooks, wife of J. Callan Brooks, police justice, is named as executrix.

By the terms of the will the estate, real, personal and mixed, is divided into four equal parts, two of which are devised to his daughter, Mrs. Brooks, and the remaining two shares to his sons, Kenneth Stuart Patton, now in the consular service of the United States, and to Leicester Patton, city engineer of Pittsburgh, Pa.

To Kenneth S. Patton is left an antique sideboard, once the property of James Monroe, fifth President, who for 26 years made his home at Ash Lawn, this county, now converted into a public shrine.

Arlington Groups Seek Cut in Costs

Bar Experts and Others Study County Expenses; Saving on Roads.

While the special committee from the Arlington County Bar Association is preparing to make a study of the cost of county government as the basis for a reduction in taxes, Delegate Hugh Reid yesterday pointed out that the last General Assembly provided a way for cutting costs by the consolidation of counties.

While the offices of treasurer and commissioner of revenue may be combined at some time in the distant future, Mr. Reid declared such a plan could only be accomplished by a constitutional amendment, which requires favorable action by two successive sessions of the General Assembly, followed by a vote of the people.

Of the 100 counties in the State, 94 voted to stay within the provisions of the Byrd road act. This has resulted in transferring the cost of road construction and maintenance to the State. While Arlington County voted to remain out of the Byrd road act, it is Mr. Reid's belief that this matter could be taken care of if the citizens of the county desired to effect a consolidation with Fairfax County, or with Fairfax and other counties.

STREET WORK FUNDS MARYLAND PROBLEM

Diversion of Gasoline Tax, as Ritchie Proposes, Would Cut County Levy.

The financing of street work in the incorporated towns in nearby Maryland is an unsettled problem which must be solved before the gasoline tax revenues can be diverted to the county roads system, as proposed by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie.

At present most of the incorporated towns depend for their street work money largely on the rebates they receive from the county. In Prince Georges County the towns get back 75 per cent of the road tax levied by the county on the property within the town. In Montgomery County the towns receive a rebate of 6 cents of the 14-cent rate levied on the property in the town.

Diversion of the gasoline tax will greatly reduce or eliminate entirely the county tax for roads. If it is eliminated, then the county will have no money to return to the town. If it is reduced, the road rebate will be reduced in the same proportion.

Three Alternative Plans.

The State Roads Commission, which hopes to have the spending of the gas tax money on county roads, has no solution to offer. The problem has not been studied by them. The towns themselves are still in the dark about what to expect, but some of them are asking the Legislature for permission to levy their own road tax. The county commissioners have not agreed on any way to insure that street work in the towns will be kept up.

There seem to be three main alternative plans which may be adopted for this purpose if the money is to be spent by the commission. They are:

1. All the gas tax money can be spent on county roads, the towns to receive none of it, their street work to be financed by a town tax sufficient to keep their paving in condition.

2. The State roads commission to give to the town a sum approximating what they received from the county. This may be fixed definitely or may be made flexible to allow for increases in population or assessed value.

3. The State roads commission to maintain the streets in the towns as they will maintain the county roads under the new scheme. The commission may or may not take over the responsibility for retiring bonds already issued by the towns for street construction.

Plan for State Upkeep.

The third plan might be made effective in one of two ways. The law diverting the gasoline tax revenues might stipulate that the State roads commission keep up the streets. Or the county commissioners might request the commission work on certain streets, as they will ask the commission to work on certain roads under the new division of funds.

The problem is less difficult of solution if the money is to be turned over to the county commissioners to be spent directly in lieu of county tax collections. In this case, it is probable that the commissioners would return to the towns a sum approximating the amount they now receive.

Even if no money is to be turned back to the towns, and they have to keep up their streets by local taxes, they will be better off than at present, it is pointed out. The town tax rate can be 8 cents less than the county rate was in Montgomery, or 5 cents less in Prince Georges County, and still yield as much as the rebate amounted to.

This cut will represent the difference between the amount now collected by the county, and the amount turned back to the town.

R. F. C. PROBE HALTED BY LACK OF FINANCE

Senate Committee Suggests Deeper Inquiry Might Be Advisable.

(Associated Press.)

The suggestion that a more extensive inquiry be made into the Reconstruction Corporation's loans faces the Senate as a result of yesterday's report from an investigating committee that it had no "criticism," but that it had not dug deep for lack of funds.

Senator Couzens, of Michigan, chairman of the special committee, reported this qualified "clean bill of health," with the unanimous indorsement of the committee, suggesting that if the Senate wished to know more about the outgo of reconstruction funds it should consider the expense as well as the benefits to be derived. No immediate move was made by senators to furnish enough funds to get behind the figures on the corporation's books.

The report climaxed many months of investigation by the special committee, headed by the wealthy Michigan Republican, into the loans made by the Reconstruction Corporation prior to the time the House began to make them public.

Publicity Value Doubted.

The House since has called for a report of those loans which have not been published, but the Couzens committee in its report said:

"Your committee does not recommend that the loans be made public in view of the fact that when the loans were made the act did not require that they be made public."

Among the thousands of loans investigated by the committee was the much discussed advance to the Chicago Bank headed by Charles G. Dawes, former president of the R. F. C.

This loan, reportedly amounting to $90,000,000, has been widely criticized in Congress and was the subject of discussion during the recent political campaign.

The committee made no direct reference to it, but it was included among the loans of which the committee said it had no criticism.

So Far, So Good.

"From the data at hand," the report said, "your committee is unable to make any criticism. The loans all seem to have been made in accordance with the law, except that we have not been able to determine whether the loans were made as required by section 5, of the law, namely, to aid agriculture, industry and commerce."

The report said the committee's work had been curtailed by "the limited opportunity presented."

"No funds having been provided," it said, "an examiantion of the records of the corporation was not made, nor the securities checked."

To have done this, the committee added, a substantial staff of assistants would have been needed.

Colored Voters Group To Organize Maryland

County chairmen were named as follows: J. M. Thomas, Charles County; Lorenzo Young, Prince Georges; B. L. Lee, Washington; Albert Keys, Frederick; Charles Butler, St. Marys; William Powell Howard.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

TREATING BERNARD ROUGH.

("Treat Shaw rough when he arrives in the United States and he will love the country. Give him something to curse about. Treat him like a renegade and you will make a hit with him." —Maurice Colbourne, English actor and friend of the noted author.)

SCENE: Deck of the steamship carrying Mr. Shaw. The ship is nearing the United States coast.

Secretary—We're nearing America, sir.

Shaw—How unfortunate!

Secretary—We'll be there in another 24 hours, the captain says.

Shaw—Ship officers are like that: Always trying to spoil somebody's pleasure. I'm jolly well inclined to disappoint my American public by not going ashore at all.

Secretary—You'll be expected to land, sir.

Shaw—That's just it. The streets will be full of people waiting to welcome me and I've a mind to disappoint them. By the way here's a copy of the ship newspaper. Let's see what America's doing in preparation for my arrival. Would you look it over? I left my glasses in the cabin.

Secretary (reading an item)—San Francisco, Jan. 18.—No plans have been made to receive George Bernard Shaw when he arrives here, it was said by the mayor today. The mayor stated further that this was the first inquiry that had been made about Mr. Shaw's visit.

Shaw—Stupid fellows, those American mayors! Any other items?

Secretary (after a little searching)—Here's something headed, "SHAW'S TRIP HOAX." Shall I read it?

Shaw—Certainly.

Secretary—It's dated Chicago and says: "Theodore Dreiser, passing through this city today, said in an interview concerning the visit of George Bernard Shaw to America, that he thought the whole thing a joke. 'Shaw died some years ago,' said Mr. Dreisser, 'if I am not mistaken.'"

Shaw (quite darkly)—Really!

* * * *

(At this point two passengers stroll by.)

First Passenger—Know who that fellow is?

Second Passenger.—No.

First Passenger—That's Bernard Shaw, the author.

Second Passenger (staring).—Oh, yes. Beatrice Lillie's husband. I saw his picture, "Cavalcade." Quite stupid.

Shaw (in a rage)—Americans, of course!

Secretary—Obviously.

(Mr. Shaw paces the deck. Presently the captain of the ship comes along.)

Mr. Shaw—Ah, good morning, captain. When do we reach America?

Captain—We should be there by tomorrow night, and incidentally I've had a most curious wireless message. It says we may not be allowed to dock.

Mr. Shaw—Why not?

Captain—Something about the American Authors Society objecting to you. The message spells your name Shawe. It says American literary circles consider your short poems too full of sex.

Shaw (violently, as he starts undressing)—Short poems, eh? Dead for years, eh? S-h-a-w-e, eh? I'll show 'em.

Captain—What're you going to do?

Shaw—Swim ashore the minute we're in sight of land! I'll show the United States who I am!

TECHNOCRATICALLY SPEAKING.

The technocrats say that it is possible to produce a razor blade, which will last 100 years and not have to be sharpened. But nobody wants to let a corn go that long.

* * * *

When the country does away with all money and substitutes "ergs," as proposed by the technocrats, how can we endow a library or give the daughter a proper coming-out party?

* * * *

And can you fancy the gloom technocracy would cause at Yale, Harvard or other big universities? With people paying for football seats with certificates of energy and with no contractor willing to start the Lester Titwillow Quadrangle on a gift of 3,000,000 "ergs," life in the major university would be pretty tough.

Mrs. Roller Gets $100 For First Prize Poster

Mrs. Margaret J. R. Roller, of Takoma Park, Md., yesterday was awarded $100 for her poster which took first prize in the contest held by the Arts Club in connection with the Bal Boheme, to be held February 6 at the Willard Hotel.

Honorable mention went to W. Richard Anthiony, 1830 G street northwest.

PICCARD ENVISIONS WASHINGTON-PARIS DASH IN SIX HOURS

Explorer of Stratosphere Foresees Time Water Drops Light City.

Describing his own stratospheric ventures, Prof. Auguste Piccard pictured transoceanic flights at high altitudes as accomplished in several hours' time in an address delivered before the National Geographic Society last night.

This mode of travel, he stated, would not be hampered by adverse weather conditions because of the calm existing above the atmospheric belt. Within a few years, he envisioned the possibility of a six-hour trip from Washington to Paris.

Speaking at the Washington Auditorium, Prof. Piccard told the more than 3,000 gathered that the cosmic rays were the world's future source of energy, manufactured at little or no cost from such abundant sources as water, by smashing atoms.

Energy From Cosmic Rays.

The famous stratosphere explorer said the energy from the cosmic rays could operate hundreds of high-powered machines and that three drops of water could be utilized to light up the City of Washington for one night.

With this new form of power, he predicted, "what coal remains in the earth's veins will suddenly become valueless. The day this happens I advise all of you who own shares in coal mines to have sold them the day before.

"It is conceivable that somewhere along the Milky Way in the celestial laboratories these rays are flying off from the very process of creation, while new worlds are being fashioned."

Audience Closely Attentive.

His speech, colored with a marked foreign accent, Prof. Piccard commanded the rapt attention of his audience. Their silence was broken only with spontaneous applause when the explorer explained some especially ingenious feature of his famous balloon.

Slides picturing various stages of ascent of the air vehicle into unexplored altitudes were shown and explained by the speaker. His first attempt he described as a failure and said that newspapers termed it as another venture which failed due to the oversight of the proverbial absent-minded professor.

Details of his trip and the personal experiences he and his associate encountered in the flights were recounted by the explorer as Alpine views taken 10 miles above the earth's surface were shown.

He was introduced to the audience as a scientist and inspiring teacher by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society.

Suicide Is Verdict In Harmon's Death

Widow Tells Detectives She Had Refused to Rejoin Mate.

Acting Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the case of John Harmon, 27, who shot himself in front of his wife's home at 1246 I street southeast after she refused to live with him.

Mrs. Harmon told detectives she had left her husband about a month ago taking their two children, Dorothy, 2 years, and Betty, 10 months, with her to the home of her mother at the I street address. She said her husband called to see her Thursday night and begged her to go with him to Windsor, Md., where he had obtained a job. He threatened to kill himself with a shotgun he had with him, if she refused to accompany him.

When she refused, he returned to his home at 1250 Eleventh street southeast and wrote a 15-page letter in which he aired his troubles. He then returned to the I street residence and on the sidewalk pointed the gun at his head and fired.

Two Accused Policemen Give Bond for Hearing

Appearing in Police Court voluntarily yesterday, Policemen Jeremiah J. Cullinane and Luther C. Wise, of the Ninth precint, were released on bonds of $500 each for arraignment today.

Both men are charged with attacking Dr. G. W. Beasley, colored druggist. Dr. Beasley told Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keogh that he remonstrated with two men for their treatment of two colored women, and, he said, the pair, later allegedly identified as the policemen, threatened him.

PICCARD VISITS WHITE HOUSE

RELIEF ALLOTMENT WILL BE INCREASED

Families of 4 to Get $3.65 Weekly Instead of $3.20; 2,000 Cards Issued.

The unemployment relief subcommittee of the Board of Public Welfare yesterday afternoon mapped out roughly the scale of disbursements to be followed until June 30 under the appropriation of $625,000 expected to be made available next week with the signing of the District deficiency bill.

Meanwhile, approximately 2,000 work cards were being issued by the relief organization headed by Leroy A. Halbert, and men and women were being put to work as formerly though they will not be paid before next Saturday. Made work has been suspended since last Monday due to lack of funds, and today the weekly pay roll will amount to only $7,000, which is in payment for work done last Saturday and Monday.

The relief subcommittee yesterday decided to disburse approximately $25,000 a week until the middle of April, after which the amount of relief will be scaled down to about $22,000 a week until July 1. Such a scale will leave a margin of $25,000 for the half year.

Such a scale of relief will enable the relief organization to raise the amount paid each family of four from the recent $3.20 a week to $3.65, against the $4 granted last fall. Some 6,700 families are being cared for at present.

Exact details of expenditures will not be worked out until the bill providing $625,000 for the remainder of the fiscal year is signed. One of the questions to be decided at that time is whether bachelors are to be included in the relief disbursement, as recommended by the welfare board when it urged the District Commissioners to ask for $1,500,000. As this estimate was cut by the Commissioners to $1,250,000, however, it is expected that bachelors will continue to be excluded.

P. U. C. TO SUBMIT ANSWER TO PEPCO

Body Expected to Turn Down Proposal to Revive Consent Degree.

The Public Utilities Commission today will dispatch its answer to the counterproposal of the Potomac Electric Power Co., regarding a reduction of electric rates this year, and it is confidently expected that the suggested revival of the consent decree will be rejected.

Negotiations intended to effect an amicable settlement have been under way between the commission and the power company since the latter submitted its proposal last Tuesday. Whether any settlement agreeable to both parties has been reached has not been made known.

The commission has recourse to several moves should the power company not consent to another temporary compromise rate cut similar to that effected last year. It might order an immediate reduction in rates over the protests of the power company, or it might begin a valuation of the company's properties.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech already has announced his opposition to the power company's proposal or any arrangement which would revive the consent decree.

Man Asks Jury Trial In Assault and Arson

His penchant for setting fires yesterday got James Coleman, colored, in trouble when he was held for the grand jury on a charge of arson after he had been arraigned in Police Court.

On a charge of striking a person who is alleged to have witnessed his act, he demanded a jury trial, which was set for January 25. On the arson charge he was held under bond of $5,000.

Avalanche of Boxing Votes Continues to Be Favorable

Post Readers Give Support to Suggestion High-School Gymnasiums be Used for Intercollegiate Bouts; Board Acts Wednesday.

An overwhelming sentiment in favor of the use of public school gymnasiums for intercollegiate boxing bouts is reflected in the straw vote being conducted by the Post. Of 670 ballots received, 653 are in favor of the proposal and 17 against, a ratio of more than 38 to 1.

Yesterday the mails brought 338 ballots marked affirmatively and 7 "No." There were 6 affirmatives unsigned and 2 negatives unsigned.

The result of the poll will be presented to the Board of Education Wednesday when the board will pass upon the application of Dean John R. Fitzpatrick of Columbus University, for permission to use the McKinley High School gymnasium to stage bouts with teams of other institutions.

Ballots printed in yesterday's paper were without space for names and addresses. These ballots will be honored and tabulated in the general count. Separate tabulations of signed and unsigned ballots also will be made.

Those who have ballots from yesterday's paper may have their votes counted in the signed tabulation by writing names and addresses on the ballot face.

Ballots will appear daily in The Post until Tuesday. All ballots must be delivered at The Post before 7 o'clock Tuesday night, so a complete tabulation can be made in time for presentation Wednesday.

BOXING BALLOT

Believing there is great interest in the controversy before school officials on the use of school buildings for amateur boxing, The Washington Post offers its readers an opportunity to express an opinion on the matter. The results of the poll will be presented to the Board of Education at its next meeting.

The question on which those interested are to cast their votes is:

DO YOU FAVOR THE USE OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS FOR AMATEUR BOXING?

YOUNG MAN IS SHOT IN EFFORT TO HALT 2 FLEEING BANDITS

Armed Pair Hold Up Stores Few Blocks Apart and Wound Pursuer.

Two merchants, operating less than six blocks apart, last night fell victims to a pair of daring bandits who, in their final flight from a store at 1216 North Capitol street, ruthlessly shot down a 19-year-old boy as he attempted to block their path.

The robbers first made an appearance at the grocery store of George Harper, First street and Florida avenue northwest. They entered, Harper said, shortly after 7 p. m. and while one stood near the doorway the other asked for a package of cigarettes.

As Harper turned to fill the order, he told police, his customer stepped behind the counter and threatened him with a revolver. Harper told the intruder he had no money, and as he spoke, quickly moved to conceal a cash register beneath the counter.

Customer Also Searched.

Harper was then searched and 65 cents taken from his pocket. A customer, who happened to enter as the holdup was in progress, likewise submitted to a search, but the bandits took nothing.

The men fled and Harper summoned police. As a report was being made of his loss, a second holdup call was received at the North Capitol street address.

Hurrying to the scene, police learned that Sam Scuderi, proprietor of another grocery store, was forced to surrender $30. His assailants answered the description given by Harper.

Young Man Shot in Thigh.

As the robbers fled from Scuderi's store, Ralph Raedy, 19, who chanced to pass by, gave chase. One of the bandits turned and fired three times. Raedy was wounded in the left thigh. After treatment at Sibley Hospital he was allowed to return home.

Scuderi, who was in the store with his wife, Mrs. Margaret Scuderi, told police that the intruders also asked for cigarettes upon entering.

They were described as colored men—a tall one and a short one—wearing overcoats and caps.

Crittenton Home Managers Confer

C. A. Snow, Sr., Donates $45 for Savings of Infants.

The monthly luncheon and business meeting of the board of managers of the Florence Crittenton Home was held yesterday at the institution. Reports of all standing committes were received. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, president.

Announcement of the presentation by C. A. Snow, sr., of $1 bills to start bank accounts for each of 45 babies in the home was made. A new radio has been provided for the hospital ward, it also was reported. Supt. Jean F. Cole reported 50 girls and 45 babies in the home during the month and the marriages of three former girl inmates.

Four major operations and 15 minor operations comprised the surgical report for the month. Fifteen cases of grip and three cases of influenza were treated. Three boys and one girl were born during the month.

Mrs. Hoover Visits De Quiros Exhibit

Authority Calls Collection of Argentine Paintings Most Interesting.

Mrs. Hoover, Cabinet members and leading members of the Diplomatic Corps attended the opening of an exhibition of paintings by Cesareo Bernaldo de Quiros, of Argentina, at the National Museum of Art yesterday.

Secretary and Mrs. Stimson and Secretary Adams were among the interested celebrities who visited the gallery.

The exhibition was described as "one of the most interesting individual collections ever brought to the gallery" by Dr. Charles Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

MRS. WILSON JOINS INAUGURATION UNIT ON FAMOUS GUESTS

More Than 30 Organizations Apply for Places in March 4 Parade.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the War President, yesterday consented to serve as a vice chairman of the committee on distinguished guests at the Roosevelt inaugural March 4.

Other vice chairmen of the committee will be Woodbury Blair, Joseph P. Tumulty, Warren D. Robbins, B. Sumner Welles, Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Mrs. Francis G. Newlands, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson and Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, it was announced by Raymond T. Baker, chairman.

It was announced at headquarters of the inaugural committee yesterday that more than 30 organizations had already signified their intention to participate in the traditional Pennsylvania avenue parade.

Requests have been received from political groups, veterans organizations, bands and schools. Pending the selection of a grand marshal, final decision on the character and number of units to be in line is being deferred.

In form the parade this year will follow established precedent. First will come the regular Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard. Then National Guard detachments will follow and the march will be ended by the line of other groups.

Huston Thompson, chairman of the committee on general entertainment, announced that his committee would occupy quarters at room 538 in the Washington Building after Monday.

In a warning to the public, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, general chairman, announced that no solicitors have yet been authorized to solicit advertisements for the inaugural program.

Stagger Plan Gets Trial for Students

System Will Be Started at Eastern High by February 1.

To nullify congestion in Eastern High School a stagger plan of attendance will start February 1, Dr. Stephen E. Kramer announced yesterday.

Dr. Kramer said the first platoon, known as Group L, will start at 9 a. m. The second platoon, known as Group M, will begin at 11:30 a. m. When the second group starts the first lunch period will begin, so that all classrooms will be housing all of Group M and two-thirds of Group L.

The balance of Group L will be in the lunchroom. The second lunch period will begin at 12:15, and will end at 1 p. m. The third lunch period will be from 1 p. m. to 1:45. At the end of the third lunch period, the students with shorter schedules will leave school. Under the double shift last year at Western High School a platoon went to school at 8:30 a. m. and left at 1 p. m., the second started at 1 p. m. and left at 4:30 p. m.

J., of Georgetown, and about 125 members of the fraternity, who now reside in Washington. The Georgetown chapter has elected Maj. Alexander L. P. Johnson, of Fort Meade, Md., president. He is a special student at the school of foreign service.

MERIT PLAN URGED IN FEDERAL WORK

Dr. O'Rourke Says Promotion From Within Would Cut Overhead.

A plan for reducing the cost of Federal personnel, and at the same time increase employes' pay checks, insuring more efficient personnel and making possible careers in the service, has been suggested to the Civil Service Commission by Dr. L. J. O'Rourke, director of personnel research for the commission.

Dr. O'Rourke advocates filling a vacancy in the higher grades by advancing a qualified employe from the next lower grade, or one in the same grade, but receiving a lower salary. The vacancy in the lower grade would be filled by advancement of a qualified worker in the same grade or the next lower grade, and so on down the line.

An example was given showing how filling a vacancy in a $7,000 a year position would result in the saving of $2,200 a year to the Government, and an increase in pay of $2,300 a year to the employes affected.

He pointed out that the practice of filling vacancies from within would reduce the number of better qualified people leaving the service, and insure lower turnover costs. At the same time it would build a definite career system, he believes.

"The program outlined indicates the desirability of the removal of certain restrictions in the present economy legislation, which discourages the filling of vacancies from within the service," he reported. Practically no transfers now are being permitted.

Under O'Rourke's plan, nine employes, if found to be qualified, could receive promotions or changes in grade by means of one vacancy.

Seven Arrests and Loot Laid to Robbery Ring

With the arrest of seven colored men and several colored women, Third Precinct police last night expressed belief that they had broken up a well-organized housebreaking and burglary ring. The arrests were made yesterday morning.

In a raid at 1337 W street northwest, approximately $1,000 worth of loot was recovered. Police said this house was the ring's headquarters, from which they worked in pairs in their thefts. Clarence Bradford, 32, colored, of the W street address, is believed by police to have directed the ring's activities.

CIVIL SERVICE HEAD DENIES CHARGE HE IS 'SHIFTING FRONT'

Answers Bingham in Row on Pending Economy Bill and Merit System.

Chairman Thomas E. Campbell of the Civil Service Commission yesterday denied charges that the commission is "shifting front" in its stand against enactment of Senate Economy Committee recommendations depriving the commission of personnel records, in a letter to Chairman Hiram Bingham, of the Senate Economy Committee.

The letter was in answer to Bingham's statement that the committee recommended substantially what the committee asked. Senator Bingham's retort followed Mr. Campbell's charges that the committee aimed a mortal blow at the merit system.

"Inserted New Element."

"No member of the Civil Service Commission has ever recommended the plan contained in Section 14 of the bill," Gov. Campbell wrote Senator Bingham yesterday.

"The commission is not 'shifting front'," he said. "Its recommendation today is exactly the same as its prior thoroughly thought out recommendation to your committee. The trouble is that your committee has inserted a new element. There has been no change of front by the commission. It unanimously recommends against the enactment of section 14 into law and it has not changed its opinion with respect to this matter.

"My dear Senator, let us keep the records straight. The development of the merit system is a matter of national moment."

History of Recommendations.

Gov. Campbell's letter recited the history of all recommendations made by the Civil Service Commission since the Senate Economy Committee first called on the various bureaus for advice, and pointed out that the commission had asked for "centralization" of records in the interest of economy, whereas the Senate Economy Committee provided for "decentralization" by leaving maintenance of records to the various bureaus and departments.

"The commission finds it possible to maintain its records of personnel for the whole Government establishment with less than 50 employes who are all in the low clerical grades," he said. "It is obvious that personnel records could not be maintained in 50 different establishments with a personnel less than several times that number."

TRAFFIC TOLL

TO DATE.

Safety zones are for the protection of pedestrians. There are still a few motorists who apparently don't know this.

A safety zone may be identified by a white rectangle along side a car track or by three little white buttons set in a row. The police are very particular about these zones and woe betide the driver who is caught running through one.

The law is very explicit. It is contained in Article 3, Section 3, of the traffic manuel and reads:

"No person shall drive a vehicle in or through any part of any safety zone, whether such zone be occupied or not."

	1932.	1933.
Deaths	6	2
Injuries	148	137
Accidents	270	224
